Republicans Nominate Landon on First Ballot

Parliament Is Created With Total of 900 Representatives.

New Constitution Charted by Stalin

Equality to Both Sexes, Free Press, Jobs for All Guaranteed.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, June 11.—An official program for the building of a "Soviet democracy," which calls for a government through two parliamentary-like bodies to be known as supreme councils, was made public tonight.

The presidium of the All-Union Central Executive Committee approved the text of a proposed constitution for the U. S. S. R., and convoked a session of the All-Union Congress of Soviets for November 25 to pass on it.

Members of the two bodies will be elected for terms of four years and have the rights initiating and promulgating legislation.

Drawn up under the supervision of Joseph Stalin, Russia's "man of steel," the constitution grants equal voting rights to all citizens regardless of class or origin, save those disfranchised by the courts.

It establishes a system of direct elections by secret ballot and extends citizenry rights to freedom of speech and press.

900 to Represent People.

The parliament as a whole, or two chambers combined, is to be known as the Supreme Council of the Union, and Council of Nationalities. The former will be made up of approximately 600 deputies and the latter of about half that number.

Deputies to the Council of the Union will be elected directly by citizenry, the ratio being one delegate to each 300,000 inhabitants.

Deputies to the Council of Nationalities will be chosen by the supreme councils of the 11 allied republics making up the U. S. S. R., and by central soviets in the so-called autonomous republics and provinces.

Each allied republic will have the right to name ten deputies to this body. Each autonomous republic will name five and each autonomous province two.

The constitution creates five new allied republics. They are Azerbaijan, Georgia, Armenia, Kazakstan and Kirghis, splitting up the old Transcaucasian republic and and making a total of 11, compared with the present seven.

The Supreme Council of the U. S. S. R. will be all powerful, having the authority to declare war, ratify international agreements and discharge and appoint members to the Council of Peoples Commissars. The latter body is the Soviet equivalent to a cabinet or council of ministers.

When the two chambers making up the Supreme Council fail to agree, the presidium of the Supreme Council will be empowered to dismiss the council and call a new election.

All Given Right to Vote.

The right to vote was granted all citizens over 18, regardless of sex, rdace, social origin, religious beliefs, previous activities or amount of property owned. The right to stand for election was granted on the same basis.

Courts will be presided over by judges elected to three-year terms. The constitution guarantees the citizenry religious freedom and forbids arrest except by order from the court or prosecutor.

It also guarantees all citizens the right to employment and payment "in proportion to the quantity and quality of work performed."

The constitution expressly states women are to have equal rights as men in all branches of economic, cultural, public and political life.

Work is described as "the duty of every able-bodied citizen in accordance with the principle that he who does not work does not eat."

Full protection is promised for private property such as "houses, household furnishings, articles of personal consumption and comfort and savings accounts."

The parliamentary bodies will hold two 60-day sessions yearly. A simple majority is required to enact legislation.

7 Drown as Steamer Sinks in the Danube

Vienna, June 11 (AP).—Seven members of the crew drowned today when the Danubian steamship Vienna broke in two in a crash against a pile of the Reich's Bridge. She sank in three minutes.

Caught in a swift current of the Danube, the ship was swept into the pile sideways as hundreds of Viennese watched. She was moving down river for coal preparatory to taking on 1,200 passengers.

Roosevelt, En Route to Dallas, Hails Texas' Fight for Liberty

President, Extolling Principle of Peace, Says Nation Does Not Now Need to Arm; Can Battle for Humanity Without Bloodshed.

By the Associated Press.

Aboard Roosevelt Train En Route to Dallas, Tex., June 11.—Texas welcomed President Roosevelt with a roaring "yipee" today and he responded with a warm tribute for its rebellion against restricted "civil liberties" which won its independence from Mexico a century ago.

At San Antonio, where he placed a wreath at the Alamo, and at San Jacinto Battlefield, near Houston, the Chief Executiv extolled the principle of peace, but said Sam Houston at San Pacinto and Travis, Bowie, Crockett and Bonham at the Alamo were fighting in 1836 for a justiable cause—liberty from civil restraints imposed by the Mexican dictator, Santa Anna.

Mexico itself had won freedom from Spain only 15 years before, he said.

Remember the Alamo."

"Without the inspiration of the cry—'Remember the Alamo'—the great Southwest might never had become a part of theh Nation," he asserted at the mission where, in February, 1836, 182 Americans—the entire force—lost their lives in the battle with Mexico.

Two months later, Gen. Houston captured Santa Anna at San Jacinto, where the President spoke earlier in the day in a broiling sun. There he declared that while America desired no further territorial expansion, the establishment of Texas as an independent republic and later as an American State was justified by the "natural colonization of later years."

Unlike those who fell at the Alamo, the President said there, the American people now "do not need to take up arms; * * * We can carry o na national war for the cause of humanity without shedding blood."

Crowd of 300,000.

San Antonio gave the rPesident just as warm a welcome as Houston, but it was a somewhat smaller turnout than at the home town of Jesse Jones, chairman of the RFC, who estimated the crowd at close to 300,000.

En route to Dallas, centennial center, where tomorrow morning the President will deliver the second and Third streets and a portion of the Industrial Home School property between Observatory Circle and Wisconsin avenue, south of Calvert street, now owned by the District.

If all these proposals are effected roughly $700,000 will be saved.

Three of the engineer committee's suggestions were rejected by the board's finance committee. These provided for recommendations against the expansion of the site on the ground for the Morgan School because "the small area available does not justify the estimated cost;" against the purchase of the old cemetery site near Adams Mill road for $40,000 because of topography and to establish a school in the United States reservation.

England Seeks Paris' Consent To Pacify Italy

Plan, Including Revision of Covenant, Would Lift Sanctions.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 11.—A British plan for the abolition of sanctions against Italy has been presented to the French government for its agreement, it became known tonight.

The plan, which diplomats said includes a general revision of the League of Nations covenant, calls for the cancellation of sanctions on the ground they failed to prevent the conquest of Ethiopia, and it now is impossible to use them to punish Italy.

Acknowledgment by the League of Ethiopia's new regime, however, would be made contingent upon Italy's willingness at Geneva to work out a definite status for the conquered nation.

A revision of the covenant would include the changing of article 16 which hitherto has made the application of sanctions obligatory for all members, it was said.

Under the plan nations of the League would be divided into regional groups with an obligatory application of sanctions to be called for only in the region where an act of aggression occurred.

Both discussions of a covenant

$700,000 Saving Sought by Use Of U.S. Land for Capital Schools

A saving of $700,000 in the purchase of land for the proposed five-year school building program through the use of Federal properties for new school sites is to be sought by the Board of Education and District Commissioners.

Recommendations of a committee of District engineers, headed by Commissioner Dan Sultan, to this effect were approved yesterday by the finance committee of the Board of Education.

As originally drawn up by the Board of Education the proposed five-year school building program would have required the purchase of new lands valued at $3,306,000. The committee of engineers recommended that the permission of the Federal Government be sought for the use as school sites of park land in the Summit Park and North Randle Highlands areas, a portion of United States Reservation 435, bounded by Madison, Oglethorpe,

Place on Ticket Is Likely to Go To Vandenberg

Senator, Backed by Landon Forces, Is Expected to Win Over Knox.

By Felix Bruner.
A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, June 11.—With the Republican Presidential nomination all over, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, and Col. Frank Knox, of Chicago, emerged tonight as the outstanding Vice Presidential possibilities.

Vandenberg has not deviated publicly from his statement that he would not accept the Vice Presidential nomination. Nevertheless, it is almost certain that if sufficient pressure is exerted, and there is sufficient demand from the delegates for him, he will be persuaded to reconsider.

That pressure and that demand are becoming constantly stronger.

Landon Pledges Strong Battle Leading to Victory in November

Governor Promises 'One of Most Aggressive' Republican Campaigns in Years; Crowds Throng Home, to Stage Huge Celebration.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., June 11.—Gov. Alf M. Landon told reporters tonight that if nominated for the Presidency by the Republican convention he would "lead the party to victory in November."

"If nominated," the Governor said, "I propose to wage one of the most aggressive campaigns the Republican Party has seen in years and lead the party to victory in November."

Later, after words of his nomination porch of his home, bathed in floodtion was received, from the front lights, Gov. Landon thanked a throng of cheering tronwspeople for their demonstration on his nomination.

"We (Mrs. Landon and I) shall always cherish the memory of this happy evening together," the smiling Kansan told the crowd.

Gov. Landon's remarks in full:

"Mrs. Landon and I are deeply touched by this expression of your good will and good wishes. We are proud, too, that so many of our friends from surrounding towns have come to join in this impromptu celebration. And, at this moment, our thoughts turn to our old friends and neighbors in Independence, Kans.

"The courage and spirit of the people of Kansas have been a constant inspiration to me during my term as Governor. Their loyalty and confidence have sustained me during these trying years, as they will continue to sustain me.

"Nothing is more worth while than the regard of one's neighbors. Nothing tugs more strongly at one's heart strings than their good wishes. If, after three years as your Governor, I did not enjoy your respect and good will I should feel that I had failed—whatever other honors might come to me. For the sentiments you manifest by your gathering here tonight, Mrs. Landon and I thank you from the bottom of our hearts. We shall always cherish the memory of this happy evening together."

Loud speakers were set up to enable the Governor to make a brief talk to the throng later in the evening.

Gov. and Mrs. Landon sat down to dinner alone—"the first dinner we have had alone for a long time—" while townspeople strained against ropes outside the executive mansion to await word of the nomination.

Mrs. Landon, wearing a white linen tailored suit, calmly supervised preparation for the meal.

Landon Telegram on Platform

By the United Press.

"To the delegates of the Republican National Convention:

"My name is to be presented for your consideration as a candidate for the nomination for President of the United States. The platform recommended by your committee on resolutions and adopted by the convention has been communicated to me. I note that according to the terms of the platform, the nomination tendered by this convention carries with it, as a matter of private honor and public good faith, an undertaking by each candidate to be true to the principles and program herein set forth.

"If nominated, I unqualifiedly accept the word and spirit of that undertaking.

"However, with that candor which you and the country are entitled to expect of me, I feel compelled before you proceed with the consideration of my name to submit my interpretations of certain planks in the platform so that you may be advised as to my views. I could not in accordance do otherwise.

" 'Support the adoption of State laws and interstate compacts to abolish sweatshops and child labor, and to protect women and children with respect to maximum hours, minimum wages and working conditions. We believe that this can be done within the Constitution as it now stands.'

"I hope the opinion of the convention is correct that the aims which you have in mind may be attained within the Constitution as it now stands. But, if that opinion should prove to be erroneous, I want you to know that, if nominated and elected, I shall favor a constitutional amendment permitting States to adopt such legislation as may be necessary adequately to protect women and children in the matter of maximum hours, minimum wages and working conditions. This obligation we cannot escape.

"The convention advocates 'a sound currency to be preserved at all hazards.' I agree that 'the first requisite to a sound and stable currency is a balanced budget.' The second requisite, as I view it, is a currency expressed in terms of gold and convertible into gold. I recognize, however, that the second requisite must not be made until and unless it can be done without penalizing our democratic economy and without injury to our producers of agricultural products and other raw materials.

"The convention pledges the party to the merit system and to its restoration, improvement and extension.

"In carrying out this pledge I believe that there should be included within the merit system every position in the administrative service below the rank of assistant secretaries of major departments and agencies, and that this inclusion should cover the entire Postoffice Department.

ALF. M. LANDON."

Republican New Deal Injects Party With Fighting Spirit

By Sidney Olson.
A Staff Correspondent.

Jerking a new banner to its masthead, this new party, formerly labeled Republicans, stuck out its collective chin, hoisted its pants and challenged the Democratic Party to a knockdown, drag-out battle. . . . Figuratively sweeping its droop-jowled old political bosses off the platform, the new party heard the young, ringing, angry voice of John Hamilton, of Kansas, typifying the New Republican deal.

The galleries were apthetic most of the night, the amphitheater resembling a scene in a surgical clinic, where the dark-clad doctors calmly observe busting surgeons at work below.

To the whanging, ear-thwacking music of three bands playing the "Star-Spangled Banner," each out of time with the others, in a shower of colored balloons cascading from the roof far above, to the noise of clackers, cowbells, drums, rattles, the operation took place.

Somehow in the brutal blue light of those huge blinding Kliegs, the magic took place, the corpse came to life.

The galleries finally caught the spirit, but only after the "second men," Vandenberg, Knox, Taft, Nice and Dickinson, had sacrificed their "ambitions" to the certain winner, Homespun, Prairie-Weathered Alf M. Landon.

The nostalgic glow of the words "A typical prairie State" was a stronger thing in that bellowing convention hall of open red mouths,

Cleveland, June 11.—The Republican Party tonight swung into the 1936 campaign with what was tantamount to two platforms—both flinging down the gauntlet of challenge to the New Deal on every frontier from finance to relief.

The first, adopted by acclamation of the convention, represented the composite compromise views of a resolutions committee torn by three-way convictions.

The second, read to the convention as Gov. Alf M. Landon's candid "interpretations" of the first, presented the future candidate's unqualified objectives on money, labor and the United States civil service.

Landon, whose platform views were widely modified by the resolutions committee, wired his original position on three planks to the convention five minutes after what was generally hailed as the most liberal platform since Theodore Roosevelt was accepted by cheering, milling delegates.

"I feel compelled before you proceed with the consideration of my name to submit my interpretations of certain planks in the platform so that you may be advised of my views," the Kansan telegraphed. "I could not in conscience do otherwise."

For Large Controls.

The convention platform had declared for State wages and hours legislation for the protection of women and children, eliminating all mention of a constitutional amendment.

Landon said he hoped the convention was right when it said such laws could be enacted within the Constitution. But if it was not, he made clear, he would favor a constitutional amendment giving to the States the necessary powers.

The convention platform, in declaring for "a sound currency to be preserved at all hazards," had eliminated all reference to return to the gold standard, and declared a balanced budget to be "the first requisite to a sound and stable currency."

Landon added a second requisite—"a currency expressed in terms of gold, and convertible into gold," but recognized that this should not be achieved until it could be done without injury to the American economic system.

Merit System Extension.

The convention platform had declared for restoration, improvement and extension of the civil-service merit system.

Gov. Landon, in his telegram, carried this a step further by asserting his advocacy of inclusion in the merit system of "every position in the administrative service below the rank of assistant seretaries of major departments and agencies, and that this inclusion should cover the entire Postoffice Department."

The dual platform declarations came as a climax to two days of effort by a shirt-sleeved resolutions committee to iron out three-cornered differences between the candidate-

Cleveland, June 11.—Alfred Mossman Landon, of Kansas, tonight was nominated as the Republican Presidential candidate by all the votes of the Republican National Convention except 19, which were cast for Senator William E. Borth, of Idaho.

Even though Borah's name was not before the convention, his campaign manager, Carl G. Bachmann, of West Virginia, and 18 delegates from Wisconsin voted for the Lion of Idaho, thus depriving Gov. Landon of being the first man nominated to the presidency without a dissenting voice since the nomination of William B. McKinley, in 1900.

This unexpected action of the Borah followers drew loud boos and hisses from the convention. The chairman of the Wisconsin delegation attempted to move that the nomination be made unanimous before the result was announced but Chairman Bertrand H. Snell would not entertain the motion. Hundreds of delegates cried to the Wisconsin Borahites to change their vote but they held firm.

The motion to make the nomination unanimous was adopted, but only after the result was announced. Landon's managers were confident that he would be nominated without a dissenting vote after all other candidates for the nomination withdrew from the race and released their delegates. But the Borah campaign manager apparently remained bitter.

To Sponsor Amendment.

Further he promised to sponsor a Constitutional amendment to clothe the States with authority to deal with the matter of maximum hours, minimum wages and working conditions for women and children, if he found that the States Constitutionally lacked such authority. The convention specifically stated its belief the Constitution gave the States this right.

And finally the convention's plank on support of the civil service did not go far enough to suit Landon. He expanded it to pledge that all administrative personnel of the Federal Government below the rank of assistant secretary of a major department would be placed under civil service.

Landon did all of this in a telegram read to the convention by John Hamilton, his campaign manager, as that red-haired victor of thhe pre-convention fight appeared on the rostrum to nominate the Kansan. The telegram generally was regarded as a mark of courage on Landon's part and a precedent-smashing action as unusual as anything attempted by President Roosevelt, who has a reputation for smashing precedents.

Says Pledges Kept.

Hamilton moved to a scathing denunciation of the New Deal by comparing the policies of President Roosevelt with those of Gov. Landon. The word "emergency," he said, had been cited as justification for the New Deal's creation of a bureaucracy, for ignoring of the merit system in appointments and for "a bewildering succession of inconsistent and impractical measures which have retarded recovery and created uncertainty."

On the other hand, Landon was elected to the office at the same time as the New Deal, but he faced the emergencies of the times, declared Hamilton, without breaking the pledges of his campaign.

Hamilton asserted there was

Kansan Proves Overwhelming Choice of Party

"nothing easier to break than a contract, once you have convinced yourself that contracts can be broken." And that "there is nothing easier than telling a half truth to cover that broken contract, once you have decided that truth is out of style."

Alfred E. Smith, following his nomination at Houston eight years ago, notified the Democratic convention that he could not be bound by the party's plank on prohibition. While his views were known, he did not formally present them to the convention until he had been nominated.

The Republican convention gave over the entire evening starting at 7 o'clock and lasting until midnight to cheering and rejoicing over Landon's nomination. Meanwhile in the speech of John Hamilton, Landon's campaign manager, nominating the Kansan, the convention heard as scathing a denunciation of the New Deal as has been uttered in this hall.

Hamilton declared that Landon had avoided "personal abuse" and in his administration there had been "neither deceit nor malice," nor was there in his personality either intolerance or egotism.

"He has never been removed from the body of the common people and I predict that no honor will ever so remove him," shouted Hamilton.

The delegates liked these references to Landon's honesty and simplicity and they cheered lustily each reference. But Hamilton hurried on, asserting that with his record Landon stood "representative as is no other man in public life today of the resurgence of a demand for individual opportunity and for real self-government in America."

Called Foe of Monopoly.

The campaign manager recited in general terms Landon's attitude on the farm, money and fiscal questions. He pointed out that he advocated attacking the evils of monopoly.

He eulogized the Kansan as a man who "has the courage not to attempt to compete in promises and panaceas with the false prophets who for three and a half years have misled and deluded the public." He added that Landon "has been willing to run the risk of being termed old-fashioned in order to reassert his opinion that phrases such as these imply a sense of values we can not afford to lose."

He proposed Landon as a man from "a typical prairie State" and this quip at the expense of Democratic Chairman James A. Farley aroused loud laughter and applause.

Behind Landon, Hamilton continued, "will rally a united party, for he has a genius for creating unity"—an ability which he may be required to display in dealing with the Borahites after what happened later in the evening.

And finally Hamilton led up to his second climax when he urged the convention to reflect its worthiest traditions and "make certain of a mightier future" by nominating "the one man who can rally to a glorious cause the rank and file of all America—Alfred Mossman Landon."

Again the delegation started marching and yelling. But this scene was an anticlimax. The steam of enthusiasm had been let off when Hamilton first proposed the name of the Kansan. Nevertheless, for 30 minutes the tumult in the hall continued, cheering Landon.

Early Sessions Merry.

The morning sessions of the convention transacted no business, although they were merry and hilarious, due to the difficulties the resolutions committee was having with the platform. After two such sessions the convention recessed until 7 p. m., but at that hour the platform was not ready.

Chairman Snell let the delegates warm up for the Landon demonstration that was to come. Delegations tried out their voices, rang their cow bells and otherwise indicated a desire to get going.

Finally the platform arrived and the convention was called to order a few minutes after 8 o'clock. It required almost an hour to read the platform. Amazingly, due to the platform's inconsistencies, none arose to challenge the document and it was adopted without a dissenting voice.

It was 9:08 when Chairman Snell announced that nominating speeches were the next order. A huge shout went up. The reading clerk called out:

"Alabama," but Alabama did not cast "24 votes for Underwood." Alabama passed. "Arizona," shouted the clerk. "Arizona yields to Kansas for the nomination of Landon," came back the reply.

Yells Greet Announcement.

Ear-piercing yells greeted the announcement.

"The chair recognizes the gentleman from Kansas, Mr. Hamilton," asserted Snell.

Young, red-haired Hamilton, Landon's campaign manager, in a double-breasted dark suit, a huge sunflower on his lapel and wearing a polka-dotted brown tie, advanced to the platform. On his chin was a courtplaster, covering an infection resulting from a razor cut. He was given a lusty ovation.

Hamilton asserted that before proceeding to present the name of his choice for the Presidency, he had an important announcement to make. A deep hush fell over the convention. Not since the convention opened had it been so silent, as delegates leaned forward in their chairs to hear.

Then Hamilton sprang his surprise. He started reading the telegram from Gov. Landon which pledged unfaltering allegiance to the platform adopted, but which undertook to interpret some of the planks.

The Kansas Governor asserted that in all "candor" he was compelled to inform the convention before it nominated him of certain views which he held.

Taking up first the labor plank, which declared for support of State laws and interstate compacts to abolish sweatshops and child labor with respect to maximum hours and minimum wages, which the platform asserted could be done within the Constitution, Gov. Landon asserted he hoped this latter opinion of the convention was right, but if that opinion proved erroneous, he would favor a constitutional amendment, he said.

Turning to the monetary plank, which omitted any reference to gold, the Kansan pledged himself to "a currency expressed in terms of gold and convertible into gold," although he said this should not be achieved until it could be done without penalizing American domestic economy.

In his third observation, Gov. Landon expanded the plank pledging support of the civil service to include a pledge to place under the merit system every administrative position below the rank of assistant secretaries of the major departments.

Surprises Convention.

The announcement took the convention completely by surprise and at first the delegates did not seem to understand what had happened. Then applause broke out, but it did not reach any great volume.

Hamilton immediately began his nominating speech, starting with an indictment of the New Deal. His nominating speech was unusual, as everything else has been at this convention. It was really a campaign speech, first hitting the New Deal and then eulogizing the Kansan. Hamilton had started the campaign to sell Landon to the Nation. He knew the latter had been sold to the Republicans.

He emphasized that Landon was the antithesis of President Roosevelt, although he did not name the President. But the parallel he drew clearly indicated he had in mind the Democratic chieftain.

For instance he declared that the standard bearer of the Republican Party should be a man with "a clear conception of the problems of those who labor, gained not from a detached theoretical viewpoint, but because he has labored; must have a realization of the needs of those in distress, not from the information of others received in surroundings of luxury, but from personal contact with those who have been in want," and so on.

Recognize Target.

The delegates quickly recognized the target of Hamilton's parallels and they applauded and yelled at each quip. Finally, but one-fourth of the way through the address, Hamilton shouted:

"I give you the name of a Republican Governor from a Republican State—Alfred Mossman Landon, of Kansas."

A mighty shout went up as the delegations tumbled out of their seats and rushed for the aisles. In the twinkling of an eye huge banners bearing Landon's name appeared all over the hall. State standards were pulled from their holders and carried into the parade, which, in many divisions, started in all parts of the hall.

The Kansas delegation, carrying cornstalks and waving aloft ears of corn, joined in the parade. Meanwhile every delegate was yelling, ringing cow bells, blowing whistles or rattling other types of noise makers. The noise welled and echoed back from the high glass roof of the hall. It exceeded greatly in volume the Hoover ovation last night when it was at its height.

Bands swarmed onto the floor, drowning out each other with "Oh, Susanna," the tune of "Three Blind Mice"—to which Republicans now sing "Three Long Years"—and other tunes. Soon the banners of candidates for the Vice Presidency appeared, until the convention was a seething mass of color and screaming men and women.

The galleries, however, remained silent for the most part. Here and there a man waved a hat. Motion picture photographers stirred up one section of the galleries for a few minutes, but as soon as the cameras stopped cranking, those spectators returned to their silent observation of the show being acted below them.

This went on for exactly 30 minutes, although Chairman Snell several times rapped for order. Finally, it was learned that the delegates thought Hamilton had finished. Snell yelled that Hamilton had not finished his speech and the delegates quieted down.

The red-haired campaign manager returned to his speech. Having nominated his candidate, he continued by giving a brief history of Gov. Landon, extolling the nominee's humble origin and his years of hard labor in the oil fields of Kansas and Oklahoma.

Landon, asserted Hamilton, knew that "no business which does not pay can long continue to meet the pay roll." The audience shouted its approval. Landon, his campaign manager continued, had not amassed a fortune in his work, but he had earned a "reputation for keeping his word, a reputation for being far too intelligent to be fooled and far too courageous to be frightened."

He cited the Governor's political interest and experience, which fitted him for his present office. He has fulfilled the duties of Governor "not only adequately but brilliantly," asserted Hamilton. And in doing so he did not change in character.

"Remained Unchanged."

"Moreover," shouted Hamilton, "under the white light of merciless publicity that glares on every Presidential candidate Gov. Landon has remained unchanged with the same sense of proportion which he has always had."

"He is still of the people, and in recent weeks the voice of acclaim arising from the rank and file of men that make up the American democracy has shown that these facts are widely appreciated."

And the convention raised a voice of acclaim, also, only to shout even louder a minute later, when Hamilton declared that in making government simple—not complex—in Kansas, Landon had not "sought to give the impression that it is a task to be assumed only by supermen."

Politics and People

80% of Cleveland Delegates Attending First Convention; Party in New Hands.

By Franklyn Waltman

CLEVELAND, June 11.—What man can think of a national political convention as strange and unusual as this gathering of Republicans in Cleveland! Here tonight we are ready to nominate Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas by acclamation.

WALTMAN.

Think of it! Nominating by acclamation, with all other candidates withdrawing from the fight hours before the roll is called, a man whom this country as a whole had not heard of 18 months ago and hardly knows now. It seems incredible. Never before has such a thing happened.

Everything around this convention has a strange touch to it. Those who have attended Republican conventions in the past are confounded and bewildered by the new order of things. The "Old Guard" is impotent. The machiavellian maneuvering in smoke-filled rooms so typical of past Republican meetings is absent.

Indeed, the entire convention and its activities now revolve around new leaders and new faces. A studious member of the New York State delegation has made a careful comparison between the personnel of this convention and previous meetings. He found that only 20 per cent of the delegates here had previously participated in a Republican convention.

A brief comparison of this year's roll call with that of four years ago indicates that his conclusion is approximately correct. That is an indication that the country has tired of the old Republican leaders and has demanded new leaders. Consequently what has come to the surface here is but a ratification of the action taken by the rank and file of the Republican Party throughout recent months.

* * *

Also of more than passing significance at this Republican National Convention was the emergence of Herbert Hoover in a new role. Indicating in his address to his party that he had forsaken further political ambition, Mr. Hoover established his right to a new esteem and respect from the American people.

He stands today a greater figure, with more influence, than at any time since the economic depression engulfed his administration. Self-abnegation and the mellowing hand of time have indeed brought about a "new Hoover." Most of the bitterness which tortured the heart of the former President when he stepped from the White House on March 4, 1933, apparently is gone. He smiles again.

Instead of an object of suspicion, if not of hate and bitterness, within his own party, Mr. Hoover is now hailed as a beloved figure, an elder statesman of the party, as one to whom Republicans in hours of need and distress many turn for counsel.

He is again on the way to becoming the great figure he was when feeding the war-scourged, hungry children of Belgium.

The pendulum in public sentiment again is swinging to the right. In time he may even again become the hero of the American people, as he was when he came back from Europe after the World War. In time he may establish himself as the elder statesman of all the American people.

Of course, only time can demonstrate the fulfillment of such suggestions. Mr. Hoover is but 61 years old and he appears in good health—much better health than when he left the White House. Thus it is probable he will live for some years.

If he continues along the line he followed before this convention it may well be he will become known as the "grand old man of Palo Alto," to whom the country would turn for counsel.

This country has not had many elder statesmen. In its early days Washington and Jefferson after their retirement from the Presidency served in that role. In more recent years our Presidents have not been spared to us many years after their public retirement.

Theodore Roosevelt might well have become such an elder statesman but for the part he played in the Republican cleavage in 1912, and he died before that wound had healed. William Howard Taft, however, lived long enough to find affection in the hearts of all his countrymen and as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court he was a counselor, on a restricted scale, to the country.

But more immediate and perhaps more real is the effect which Mr. Hoover's attitude will have on the approaching Presidential campaign. The demonstration given here to the former President indicated clearly that Republicans have forgiven him for whatever responsibility he had for their disastrous defeat four years ago—and it might be said that many Republicans felt more bitter to him than did members of other parties.

Thus it is likely that the sentiment of the Republican Convention reflects the sentiment of the country, which is to say that the Democrats may be fooled if they bank on the name Hoover being anathema to the voters.

Earlier this year the Democrats regarded the name Hoover as synonymous with disaster. Nothing would have pleased them more than to have him as their Republican opponent again this year. The thought was general that the former President was one of the liabilities of the Republican Party. That may not be correct now.

Mr. Hoover may well be a real asset to Gov. Alf M. Landon in this campaign. He may have a real appeal for the middle-of-the-road voter, the man and woman who is neither ultra-conservative nor radical. And his act of support of Gov. Landon may bring to the Republican standard-bearer the votes of many women, of the peace groups and the church people—and it is for the support of these groups that the Democrats now are striving.

Rise From Obscurity to Fame Marks Landon's Career in Politics and Business

Thrift Program In Kansas Made Him U.S. Figure

Achieved Goal of 'Enough Money' in 1927, Turned to Public Career.

Picked by the Republicans as their candidate for President, spearhead in their 1936 drive against Roosevelt and the New Deal, Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas began his political career in the humble role of a precinct committeeman.

He might be called typical of the American people. Certainly he is a vigorous representative of the great Middle West, the Nation's "bread basket." It is in that section of limitless wheat fields and fertile farms that he has won acclaim for budget balancing.

"Don't spend what you haven't got," has been his fiscal policy. It has attracted wide attention at a time when most governmental budgets are being written in red ink.

From the "small-time" committee capacity, Landon, with steady, unostentatious progress, reached the Governor's mansion in Topeka.

That office furnished the springboard from which he catapulted to the national political scene, to become the standard bearer of the Republican Party.

His business and political careers are consistently parallel.

Was Once Water Boy.

He progressed from a water boy on a pipeline gang to one of his State's largest independent oil operators.

National attention first focused on him as a potential Presidential candidate because of his Republican vote-getting ability in a Democratic landslide year—1932.

The budget balancing attributed to him by his supporters has been a major factor in skyrocketing him to national prominence.

Another salient attribute which has made him a figure known up and down the United States is his "cash basis" law, applying to more than 8,000 local political subdivisions in the Sunflower State.

Because he twice has won the Kansas Governorship despite the strength of the opposition nationally, Landon became from the outset of the year the Republican potentiality in the Presidential race.

In 1932 he was elected despite the Democratic landslide that saw Franklin Delano Roosevelt sweep Kansas. Harry H. Woodring, now Assistant Secretary of War and then the Democratic candidate, lost to Landon. In the general elections throughout the country only five other Republicans were elected to Governorships of their States.

Only Republican Re-elected.

And in 1934 Alf M. Landon, the pipe-smoking sage of Topeka, was the only Republican Governor re-elected.

It was only a few months later that announcement of his "balanced budget" proposal gave his incipient boom new emphasis.

By last January his "hat was definitely in the ring" and he was considered in the running, although he declined to discuss his candidacy, and busied himself with affairs of his State in his executive offices in Topeka.

While he busied himself with his duties in Kansas, Landon's friends waged an intensive campaign in his behalf. After the Governor addressed the diamond jubilee celebration of Kansas statehood on January 29, their efforts began to be felt.

In this speech, which was Landon's first public discussion of national affairs, he lashed at "waste and extravagance," and demanded "better housekeeping" by the Government.

The avowed impatience of Landon with waste may have been due to his ancestry, which is Pennsylvania Dutch. A determining factor also may have been the shrewd training of his father, John M Landon, who prospered in the precarious vocation of an independent oil man.

Family Thrifty.

"The family always had to look after the dollars, and the cents, too," once said the elder Landon.

Following in his father's footsteps, Landon worked in the oil fields. He became an operator on his own. Also like his father before him, he took a keen interest in politics. He thought and acted for himself.

The elder Landon wanted young Alf to be a lawyer. But young Landon entered the banking business at Independence, Kans., after his graduation from the law school of the University of Kansas in 1908.

For four years Landon engaged in banking. He then turned to the oil business. He acquired a lease in northeastern Oklahoma. At that time this was known as "the poor man's field" because wells could be drilled quickly and cheaply to the shallow pool. It was not long before young Landon was on his way to a comfortable fortune.

Aided Bull Moose Move.

All the while he maintained his interest in politics. When Theodore Roosevelt bolted the Republican Party in 1912, Landon took an active part in behalf of the great T. R. His father was one of Kansas' "Big Four" delegates to the National Republican Convention, along with Henry J. Allen, later Governor and Senator; William Allen White and Victor Murdock, prominent editors, all of whom backed Roosevelt in those tempestuous pre-war days.

Young Landon again dissented in 1924, when he left the folds of the party to support William Allen White, who ran unsuccessfully for Governor as an independent on an anti-Ku Klux Klan platform.

It was back in 1914 that Landon was elected precinct committeeman for the Progressive Party, his first political office. Later he served as Republican precinct committeeman and county chairman before he became State chairman in 1928.

Fortune and industry were kind to Landon. By 1927 he had accumulated what he considered "enough" money. He then turned most of his attention to politics.

Guided Reed Campaign.

He undertook the management of Clyde M. Reed's campaign for Governor in 1928, and Reed was easily elected.

At 41, Landon became Republican State chairman, reputedly the youngest man ever entrusted with the guidance of the party's destinies in Kansas.

Reed was defeated for renomination by Frank Haucke, two years later. Haucke in turn was beaten by the Democratic nominee, Harry H. Woodring. This defeat was avenged at the polls by Landon two years later.

Romance played a subtle part in Landon's career in 1928. He met Miss Theo Cobb, a young Topeka society belle and social worker. Once more he pressed a campaign successfully, and he and Miss Cobb, whose father was a pioneer Topeka banker, were married January 15, 1930.

This was Landon's second marriage. His first wife had died in 1918, leaving him with a 1-year-old daughter, now a co-ed at the University of Kansas.

Two children were born to the marriage of Alf M. Landon and Theo Cobb. The first was Nancy Jo, on July 29, 1932, four days before her father won the gubernatorial nomination. That same week a 500-barrel oil well was brought in on one of his properties.

Called "Lucky" Landon.

A second child, John Cobb, was born to the Landons in 1933.

Landon announced a program of economy designed to reduce the cost of State government 25 per cent immediately after his inauguration.

His supporters declare he economized rigidly, and forced other State and county officials to do likewise. He reduced the State's expenses 22 per cent, 3 per cent short of his goal, his supporters say.

Under his cash basis law all local political taxing units, such as school boards and health boards and playground departments, were forced to limit expenditures to actual current income. What they did not have, they could not spend.

Other measures which followers of the Kansas Governor contend helped tighten the machinery of taxation and spending were a tax limitation statute and a public budget act. The latter required local taxing bodies to advertise their contemplated schedule of expenditures. A new budget was required if 20 per cent of the voters objected.

Bonded Debt Fell.

Under the Landon regime Kansas counties and municipalities reduced their bonded indebtedness $17,000,000 net and contributed $21,000,000 for relief. Only bonded debt of the State was for bonus payments to soldiers.

Per capita cost of government, State and local, was $71 in 1929. This was cut to $67 in 1932, and $51 in 1934. Considerable funds, however, were received from the Federal Government.

Landon favored the oil States' compact to stabilize production as Governor. He had long been interested in this proposition.

Landon was born in West Middlesex, Pa., at the Methodist parsonage of his maternal grandfather, the Rev. William H. Mossman. Christened Alfred Mossman Landon, he became "Alf" to his friends from boyhood on, and signed himself officially Alf M. Landon.

In 1915 he married Miss Margaret Fleming, of Oil City, Pa. She died three years later, leaving 1-year-old Peggy Anne.

A few weeks after his wife's death, Landon enlisted in the Army, in August, 1918, and was commissioned a first lieutenant in the Chemical Warfare Division. The following December he was mustered out, and swapped his khaki for mufti.

Anecdotes Numerous.

Landon lore, stories that characterize the life and early career of the man who may become the next President of the United States, are numerous.

They are not unlike the Lincoln legends which sprang up around the gaunt, kindly Emancipator, who, like Landon, rose from humble beginnings to greatness.

Landon didn't wait until he reached man's estate to get into business. As a 10-year-old he was earning his own living. He had his own egg route, corresponding roughly to the paper route of the boy who lives in the city.

Oldsters, who remember Alf as a "shaver," delight in telling how he literally forced one of his hens to produce. Sitting beside a nest in a hot hencoop he was found holding a hen in place.

"I need another egg to make a dozen, and this hen hasn't laid yet," he explained.

Persistence won. The hen delivered and the eggs were sold.

Heart of the house is the spacious library, where, in the autumn and winter, a friendly wood fire crackles.

Here Landon has his pipes and his books. Many a guest invited into the library has been asked to stay over night.

This habit of off-hand hospitality has caused some difficulty since the family moved into the Governor's Mansion in Topeka, where facilities are insufficient to permit unexpected guests.

Landon is fond of horseback riding. He is enthusiastic about football. When it is possible he attends the games at the Univeristy of Kansas, sometimes sitting beside his pretty daughter, who is a student there.

In high school Landon played end. That was in the day when the "flying wedge" was in vogue, and the aerial game little developed. An injury to his knee kept him off the team in college.

"End was all right," recalled Landon recently, "but I always wanted to be a halfback. I wanted to run with the ball. Maybe my son will be a halfback. He's got a mighty sturdy pair of legs."

Landon Scoffed At His Chances, Backer Asserts

Wanted to Talk Football When Subject Came Up, Says Stauffer.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 11.—Four weary but happy men tonight acknowledged the climax of a small dinner early last October when they formally launched the drive to name Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, Republican nominee for President.

The four men, two of them schoolmates of Gov. Landon, were Oscar Stauffer, of Arkansas City; Roy Roberts and Lacy Haynes, of Kansas City, and Fred Brinkerhoff, of Pittsburg, Kans.

Joining them in tonight's jubilation were others who stepped in as the drive gained momentum—John Hamilton, of Topeka; William Allen White, of Emporia; Fred Harris, of Ottawa; John P. Harris, of Hutchinson; Lester McCoy, of Garden City, and Henry J. Allen, of Topeka.

This group—including eight newspapermen—formed the nucleus of the Landon-for-President drive which in ensuing months swept the country.

Stauffer, publisher of eight Kansas newspapers and chairman of the "Landon-for-President committee," bit at a cigar, planted his feet on his desk in Landon headquarters at the Hollenden Hotel, and recalled the opening of the Landon campaign.

"Roy Roberts, managing editor of the Kansas City Star, Alf and I were all at Kansas University together, you know," Stauffer began. "However, we belonged to different fraternities. But we had been old friends and Roy and I had been supporters of the Governor.

"The Governor had been mentioned as a Presidential possibility as early as the time of his election to a second term. One day last fall I ran into Roy.

"'Roy,' I said, 'When are we going to do something about getting Alf nominated for President?'

"Mr. Roberts said he thought it was about time. So about the first of October, he, Lacy Haynes, the Kansas editor of the Star; Fred Brinkerhoff, editor of the Pittsburg Headlight and Sun, and I, got Alf to join us for dinner.

"We wanted to talk politics. But Alf wouldn't. He talked about football for an hour and a half, complaining because Kansas University had just lost a game to a small college—St. Benedict, at Atcheson.

Wouldn't Become Serious.

"Alf wouldn't take us seriously. Of course he said if the people of the country should decide they wanted him for President he would be honored, and he would do his best, but he wanted to talk football.

Finally, the boys told me to begin looking around to see what the people thought. I took two rooms in a Kansas City hotel and went to work."

The group was enlarged quickly. William Allen White, editor of the Emporia (Kans.) Gazette and long a well-known figure in State and national politics, joined the movement when he returned from a cruise. Fred Harris, Ottawa lawyer, and his nephew, John P. Harris, editor of the Hutchinson News and Herald, were quick to move to the support of their Governor. Lester McCoy, farmer and automobile dealer, was another giving time and money.

"Not one of us," Stauffer said, "has taken money for what we have done. We financed the early part of the campaign ourselves. To us, this has been a crusade."

In Politics 20 Years.

Hamilton accepted the post of Landon manager last March. The Republican national committeeman from Kansas and general counsel to the national committee, Hamilton has been active in Kansas politics for 20 years. He flew over the country in endless trips, gathering delegates for Landon.

Stauffer, Roberts, Brinkerhoff and White are natives of Kansas. Haynes is a native of Kentucky, but has lived in Kansas for more than a quarter of a century. Stuffer formerly worked on the Kansas City Star with Roberts and Haynes.

For 14 years, Roberts was Washington correspondent for the Star, and upon him, Hamilton and White the original group has leaned heavily for guidance in the realm of national politics.

Drive On to Return Borah to Congress

Cleveland, June 11 (AP).—A drive to return William E. Borah to the Senate was begun tonight after he withdrew from the Presidential race and threw his support to Gov. Landon.

The Senator, however, declined to announce his plans until he returns to Idaho following adjournment of Congress and has "an opportunity to consult the people."

"I want to find out what they have to say," he declared as he met with a group of Idahoans in his hotel room. "I will first contact all sections of the State and then decide my course."

Delegation members said Idaho would draft Borah, if necessary, for a sixth term.

"We'll see that his name is on the ticket," one said, while others joined former Gov. H. C. Baldridge in asserting:

Hearing Date Set.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., June 11.—June 23 has been fixed by the Spotsylvania County Board of Supervisors as the day for hearing all claimants to the $500 reward offered by the board for the arrest of Joe Jackson and John Shell, colored, who were executed for the slaying of Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas Coleman. Thirteen claims have been filed.

Hamilton Stresses Sound Business Record of Landon in Nomination Address

Governor's Aid Cites His Genius For Leadership

Campaign Manager Assails Spending of New Deal Administration.

Cleveland, June 11.—Text of the speech of John Hamilton today nominating Gov. Alf M. Landon for the Republican Presidential nomination was as follows:

Today this Nation is faced with the unusual picture of a President of the United States, apparently without concern and at times seemingly by design, using the powers and preogatives of his high office to undermine the American democracy. Under his Administration we have seen the courts circumvented; indefensible waste and extravagance reflected in mounting deficits; the use for partisan purposes of authority and money granted by Congress supposedly to avert suffering and distress. His only fixed policies have fostered monoply; threatened the Nation's credit; driven needed capital from the field of industrial enterprise; increased unemployment, and caused confidence in representative Government to reach its ebb. From it all there has come a sense of insecurity, of uncertainty and even of dread, precluding any hope of re-establishing individual security, of a moral re-awakening of our people, or of a permanent rehabilitation of agriculture and industry.

Although we come as Republicans we are here, in fact, representing every man and every woman who glories in the accomplishment of our Nation's past and has faith in our Nation's future. For this great group of our people the Republican Party provides the sole rallying ground for united political action. We are, therefore, charged with the responsibility of carrying out our duties here with unquestioned good faith to party and to country, and we cannot be unconscious of the profound obligation that is ours. So grave are the issues, so serious the task confronting us that we must in the fulfillment of that obligation entertain from this platform no suggestions of measures or of men unless brought to us freed from selfish motives and personal ambitions.

Cites Personal History.

If we are to fulfill that obligation, we shall here nominate one whose personal history gives full assurance of a sympathetic understanding of the problems at hand and whose experience in private life and as a public official holds out the promise that these problems will be met with efficiency, honesty and courage. Specifically, it means that he who carries the standard of Americanism in the weeks that are to follow must have a clear conception of the problems of those who labor, gained not from a detached theoretical viewpoint but because he has labored; that he must have a realization of the needs of those in distress, not from the information of others received in surroundings of luxury but from personal contact with those who have been in want; that he shall know the problems of those who cultivate the soil not through what he has learned from others who ponder these questions in academic halls but by having lived among them and having heard the story from their own lips. He must know something of the difficulties and intricacies of American business life, not from economists who have never known the necessity of meeting a pay roll, but from his own experience in business. He needs must realize that the disbursement of public funds is a public trust and not a political revelry, and he is the more apt to have that realization if his own property has not been bestowed upon him but has been gained through his own efforts.

'Tribute to Character.'

Fully conscious of the duties and obligation I conceive to be mine as a delegate to this convention and appreciating the character that we must require of our nominee, I give you the name of a Republican governor from a Republican State—Alfred Mossman Landon, of Kansas.

The personal history of Gov. Landon is a story of modern America. It is a tribute to individual opportunity and to individual character. Gov. Landon was no more favored by fortune than millions of his fellow citizens. His education and upbringing were not those which great riches can purchase. His heritage did not include material wealth. But he did share with millions of the rest of us in the mighty fortune with which American principles of life and American opportunities for life have endowed us. Faith in America and confidence in themselves guided Gov. Landon's parents while he was a boy, and that same faith has guided him in his activities as a man.

In common with the great majority of his fellow citizens Gov. Landon learned from the precept and example of his parents the abiding virtues of work, of honesty, of thrift, of modesty, and of tolerance, and he learned also the excellent and unanswerable reasons why these virtues remain with us while others less substantial fade away.

In common with all of his generation he shared the advantages of our great system of public education. In common with millions of us he was a member of the armed forces of the United States. But more important, because more characteristic of our Nation, Gov. Landon has shared directly in the work of America. Huge as was the army mobilized for war it was nothing compared to the vast army of workers who have in every generation, by their own initiative and by their own co-operation with each other, built and rebuilt America.

Gov. Landon knows what it means to labor, for under the burning sun of Oklahoma and Kansas he lived and worked in the oil fields with the grizzled veterans of the wire lines, the walking beams and the bull wheels. Gov. Landon knows what agriculture means. His business has been with farmers. His customers have been farmers. His neighbors and his friends have been farmers. Gov. Landon has known what it means to worry. You worry when the livelihood of yourself and those who work for you depends alone upon your judgment and ability. Gov. Landon knows what it means to combat hidden powers working under any name. You have to fight when your independence and your very existence are threatened by great combinations of wealth. Gov. Landon as a business man kept his independence. He met his pay rolls. He made the business pay. He knows that no business which does not pay can long continue to meet the pay roll. He knows the various forces which affect the delicate adjustment of business and the balance of which is essential to our prosperity.

Tells of Reputation.

Gov. Landon did not amass great wealth from his business, but he earned his living and he earned a reputation. A reputation for knowing how to work, a reputation for keeping his word, a reputation for being far too intelligent to be fooled and far too courageous to be frightened. It is not without effort that a man can earn his living and such a reputation; and such an achievement is sufficient for most men in their lifetime. But the tradition of this country is not only that its citizens should work, but that they should also govern themselves. Gov. Landon did not wait to assume his responsibilities as a member of a self-governing community, a self-governing State and a self-governing Nation. From the time he was old enough to assume the simplest duty of a citizen—the duty to vote, he informed himself, through contact and experience, of the workings of this machinery of self-government.

It is not, therefore, by chance that Gov. Landon received that experience in both business and Government which the party and the country recognize as an essential qualification for our leader. He learned the one as he learned the other from the ground up, not with the hope of furthering personal ambitions, but with the purpose of fulfilling his full duty as a citizen of his country.

First Success.

Gov. Landon's initial political success was based upon the opinion his fellow citizens had formed of his knowledge, his reputation and his character as shown in business and on the smaller stages of politics. No one could tell, when he was first elected Governor of Kansas, that that knowledge and that reputation and character would be sufficient to allow him to assume with credit the new responsibilities of high public office. That he did so, not only adequately but brilliantly, is a part of the history of my State. He did not change in character as Governor from the man who had run for Governor or from the successful business man interested in local politics. Moreover, under the white light of merciless publicity that glares on every Presidential candidate, Gov. Landon has remained unchanged with the same sense of proportion which he has always had. He is still of the people, and in recent weeks the voice of acclaim arising from the rank and file of men that make up the American democracy has shown that these facts are widely appreciated.

In Kansas, Gov. Landon has made State administration not complex, but simple. He has not sought to give the impression that it is a task to be assumed only by supermen. It is my prediction that as the standard bearer of his party he will be elected to the Presidency and he will meet the mutiple problems of that office in a similar spirit, which will ertate the same feeling among the citizens of the Nation; and the creation of that feeling will go far toward restoring the essential confidence of our citizens in themselves and in their Government, which is the Nation's greatest need today.

Assails Spending.

Through 3½ years we have heard much talk of emergency. Emergency has been advanced as an argument for the breaking of campaign pledges, for a reckless spending of public funds, for the creation of a bureaucracy, for the appointment of public officials for reasons of personal loyalty rather than merit, and for a bewildering succession of inconsistent and impracticable measures which have retarded recovery and created uncertainty. Yet Gov. Landon was elected to his office at the same time that the New Deal Administration was elected to power. He faced in his capacity as a State executive emergencies of the same kind that confronted the national executive. He faced also the same question of whether he should in that emergency break the pledges he had made in his campaign, or whether he should keep those pledges. The answers given by the new President and the new Governor were different and they were in character. For, as we have seen from the public record of the two of them, their characters were different.

There is nothing easier than to break a contract, once you have convinced yourself that contracts can be broken. There is nothing easier than telling a half-truth to cover that broken contract, once you have decided that truth is out of style. There is nothing easier than to promise all things to all men when your conscience is sufficiently elastic. There is nothing easier than to take any means at hand to secure votes, once you have decided that you value votes more than your own self-respect. There is nothing easier than spending money you do not have to pay, and it is easy and amusing to indict and condemn the motives of your opponents, when you have lost your sense of proportion and have become convinced that you and you alone are indispensable to the people.

Adoption of the policies that have ruled in Washington for the last four years would have been just as easy in Kansas. Except for one thing—that Gov. Landon had not seen fit to take the first steps toward unreliability. His answer to emergency was different. He decided that even if citizens were losing confidence in all else around them, at least they would not have cause to lose confidence in their new Governor.

Promised Economy.

He promised economy; he gave economy. He promised co-operation with the Legislature; he co-operated with the Legislature. He promised appointments on the basis of merit, and he made his appointments on that basis. He swore to uphold the Constitution, and he upheld it, for to him the Constitution was not an obstacle to be circumvented, but a tool to be rightly used. He avoided personal abuse in his campaign, he avoided it in his administration, and in that administration neither deceit nor malice have had a place. In his personality there is neither intolerance nor egotism. He has never been removed from the body of the common people, and I predict that no honor will ever so remove him. He has been and is, simply and plainly, one of the ordinary folk of this country, and his conception of his duty in any public place will be to be the servant of all and the master of none.

With this record and this character Gov. Landon stands before the Republican Party—representative as is no other man in public life today of the resurgency of a demand for individual opportunity and for real self-government in America. The people of our country look to him to lead them back from the deceptive shadows of uncertainty to the honest sunlight of reality.

We have met here as representatives of the Republican Party to adopt a platform and to nominate a candidate. We have adopted our platform. We have pledged ourselves to certain principles and to certain policies. I know that Gov. Landon as the nominee of this party will, when elected, carry out its pledges. Months before this convention met, he indicated to the party and to the country the position which he took upon the basic issues confronting us.

He has plainly expressed his concern in the problems of the farmer for he knows it affects every phase of our social and economic life. He knows that the farmer is entitled to receive for his crops a fair price, comparable to the price of the commodity he buys and that he should not have the value of his labor and his produce affected by artificial handicaps. He is determined that there shall be a solution of those problems but not at the cost of the farmer's rights as an American citizen.

'Confidence Needed.'

Gov. Landon has made clear also the basic policies which should be adopted by the Government in order that we may realize a business recovery which is permanent. He has made fully clear that the first essential must be the restoration of confidence. Confidence in the currency, confidence in the credit of the Government, and above all, confidence in the honesty and efficiency of the Federal Administration. As essentials for creating this confidence, he has proposed a sound and stable monetary system, a more effective budget making by the Executive and a policy of reasonable economy in the expenditures of public funds. He has given his opinion that work for those who want it will come and only come from the assurance of business and industry, that they may plan wisely for the future without fear that their plans may be dislocated at any time by a multitude of wild-cat schemes.

No friend of monoply in any business, Gov. Landon has announced without equivocation that we must attack the evils of monopoly frankly and resolutely, and must insist that Government keep in force at all times a fair competitive system.

His position on other issues is based upon this same determination to preserve equality—equality of justice under law, and equality for the wage earner in his negotiation with the wage payer. Months ago he urged us as Republicans to make it clear to the needy everywhere that the changes we pledge in the administration of relief will in no wise jeopardize the aid which the needy must receive, but will entirely be directed toward bringing order out of chaos by purging the Federal Relief Administration of partisan waste and incompetence.

'Aware of Changes.'

Gov. Landon, a product of modern America, is aware of the changes which modern American appliances and machine-minded civilization have brought about. He knows that the duty of Government is to protect those handicapped by conditions over which they have no control. And in his own words "we have begun to protect childhood but the obligation to protect old age lies straight before us." He has condemned the present Administration's debauching of the civil service and has contended that the merit system in Government employment must be restored, improved, expanded and extended to include the opening up of the higher positions.

Gov. Landon's attitude on these questions springs from patriotism and not partisanship. Accordingly he has made his appeal far beyond party lines to those citizens—Republicans, Democrats and Independents alike, who want the Government to play its proper part in meeting the problems of our times, but who wish it to do so without wasting the substance of the people or endangering their future. He believes that these moderate people want neither radicalism on the one hand nor reaction on the other; that they want performance and not promises; that they want the elimination of the hysterical tone from the Government; that they are tired of epithets, evasions and sophistries; that they want no flouting of the Constitution whether by executive evasion, loose legislation or pernicious propaganda; that they condemn attempts to create class divisions in a country that knows no classes and that they propose to solve their problems in accordance with the American system. This great group of moderate thinking people make up the vast majority of this Nation. It is this group to which Gov. Landon has appealed. It is this group which he represents.

Points to Courage.

The policies of division, despair and defeat may be effective in the building up of a political machine, but they will never bring a permanent recovery of employment. They will never bring about a permanent restoration of confidence, and they will never help to build the kind of future to which Americans have a right to think their country is entitled and toward which our history and our destiny most surely point.

Gov. Landon has dared to voice above the welter of cynicism and despair, created and approved by men in the highest places in the land, a few of the essential facts and essential beliefs by which mankind has been surely guided in past centuries in its slowly succeeding struggle toward material progress and spiritual growth. He has had the courage not to attempt to compete in promises and panaceas with the false prophets who for three and a half years have misled and deluded the public. He has not been afraid to recall our minds to the truth inherent in such supposedly outworn phrases as the ones which say "there is no substitute for courage" and "his word is as good as his bond." He has been willing to run the risk of being termed old-fashioned in order to reassert his opinion that phrases such as these imply a sense of values we cannot afford to lose.

We have been through bitter times, and they have left their mark. Our generation has seen the collapse of the financial chicanery that was to make us millionaires, and the collapse of the political chicanery that was to make us kings. Grimly we know that neither can achieve its promise, that the result of one is poverty and of the other loss of our liberties.

'Hope of Future.'

From its inception, through its darkest hours, in its worst crises, the United States has—and I say it with all knowledge of its meaning—held in its hands the hope of the future progress of the world. Here then is our responsibility. Here is the crisis which we must meet and here is the choice which we must make. Here is a record of a modern American—unpretentious, unassuming, willing to serve—but not eager to dictate. Here is a homely record, if you will, and here are homely virtues and common-sense answers. Here is no gilt and here no theatrical dramatics, no overwhelming egotism, no self-righteousness, no pretense of supremacy. Here is a man who is the product of our own country and our own time, who has made his way as we have had to make ours, and who has assumed at each turn of his life the obligations imposed on him and who has fulfilled those obligations in each instance with credit. Here is a man of a typical prairie State who has retained within his heart the spirit and the inspirations of those who came before him and of whom Whittier wrote:

"They crossed the prairies as of old
The Pilgrims crossed the sea.
To make the West as they the East
The homestead of the free."

Here is a man, Governor of a great State, with an enviable record in that high office, proving that administration may have vision and yet be honest and efficient.

Here are the policies for which he stands and the methods which he proposes, and here is something more besides—the undefinable qualities evidenced in his character and record which meet the needs of the people of this nation.

Behind Gov. Landon, as standard-bearer of the Republican Party, will rally a united party, for he has a genius for creating unity. Behind Gov. Landon will rally that great group of citizens without regard to party label, who wish to see performance and not propaganda, confidence and not confusion. Behind Gov. Landon, carrying the standard of young America, will rally that great section of the people who wish to repudiate the alien philosophies and out-worn theories and who, without regard to their own age, are young enough to have faith that we can build a greater country by carrying forward the dynamic American doctrines of hope, of tolerance, and of effort. With Gov. Landon's leadership, we can assure a Republican victory in the coming election, and under Gov. Landon's leadership as President of the United States, we can gain a national victory over the forces of depression and despair.

Here and today the Republican Party makes a choice for itself and for America. Let us then reflect the worthiest traditions of a mighty past and make certain of a mightier future by meeting our obligations for that choice with the one man who can rally to a glorious cause the rank and file of all America, and that man is Alfred Mossman Landon.

Nominated Landon for President

Vandenberg Likely Mate

Vandenberg is the choice of the Landon organization, which means, in this convention where Gov. Landon has unprecedented strength, that he is very likely to be nominated.

On the other hand, friends of Col. Knox during the few hours since he withdrew from the Presidential race, have organized an active campaign in his behalf. They have adopted the slogan "Off the Rocks with Landon and Knox."

Hamilton was among visitors to Vandenberg's hotel suite this afternoon. It is understood he discussed with the Michigan Senator the question of whether he could be persuaded to accept second place on the ticket. While Vandenberg is understood to have given him no positive answer, it is believed he left the way open should he be persuaded that there is a real demand for him.

Vandenberg has taken the attitude that he could be of considerable more service to his party in the Senate than in the office of the Vice President, where he would have little opportunity to assert himself. During recent months Vandenberg has assumed leadership of the Senate minority and has done an effective job.

On the other hand, as a 1936 candidate for Vice President, Vandenberg, who is ambitious to be President, would be in a natural position to obtain the Presidential nomination in 1940 should the Republicans be defeated. Should they be elected, his 1940 aspirations would be at an end, whether or not he becomes Vice President, because Landon naturally would be the 1940 nominee.

Senator Borah, who has been friendly with Vandenberg in the Senate, nevertheless said yesterday: "I think that Frank Knox will be the Vice Presidential nominee."

Knox had the largest pledged delegation, except that of Landon, for the Presidential nomination, and presumably would have the backing of this delegation for Vice President. On the other hand, Vandenberg could be expected to poll a great many votes from the original Landon delegates, as well as those of the Michigan delegation.

While the field of Vice Presidential possibilities remained large, little was being heard about any except Vandenberg and Knox. It is likely, however, that unless the situation changes tonight, other names will be placed in nomination for the Vice Presidency.

Steiwer Boom Wanes.

Senator Frederick Steiwer, of Oregon, the convention keynoter, early in the convention was considered an outstanding possibility, but his boom has all but vanished since his keynote speech was coldly received. Gov. Nice of Maryland, former Senator Edge, of New Jersey; Representative Wadsworth, of New York, and Robert Taft, of Ohio, are others whose names may be presented.

Vice Presidential talk replaced Presidential discussions as candidate after candidate who had been opposing Landon released his delegates. Vandenberg was the first, releasing the Michigan delegation. He was quickly followed by Knox, Borah, Dickinson and the various favorite sons, bringing about a situation believed to be unprecedented in American politics. Conventions usually renominate a President by acclamation, but seldom has a man who has not been President been so nominated.

The situation gives Landon an enormous prestige in the party and gives him a flying start in the campaign. No wounds that later must be healed will be created in the convention. Either Vandenberg or Knox could be expected to make an active, fighting campaign.

In releasing his delegation, Vandenberg dispatched a congratulatory telegram to Landon at Topeka. In a public statement he said:

"The critical nature of this situation is so challenging in view of the manifest choice of the convention we decided to lend what ever impulse we could by this action."

Knox said:

"The crisis in national affairs demands complete harmony in the selection of the candidates to be nominated in this conveniton. I greatly appreciate the loyal support of the delegations throughout the country who have expressed their choice for me for President, but feel that the time has come to release them so that there may be a united front against the common enemy."

Both Knox and Vandenberg are of the Chicago News and Vandenewspapermen, Knox is publisher berg of a paper in Grand Rapids, Mich. Both worked up through the ranks in the newspaper business.

Hoover Loses His Hat And Borrows Richey's

Cleveland, June 11 (AP).—Former President Hoover today joined the ranks of the many at the Republican National Convention who have lost their hats.

In the bustle of leaving he mislaid his gray felt. Several friends proferred theirs as he strode toward the train. Finally he accepted a straw from Lawrence Richey, his former secretary.

Institute Poll of Opinion Shows States Differ on a Third Term

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, June 11.—Mississippi voters may not object to a third term for President of the United States, but the voters of Ohio do object.

In a Nation-wide poll on this question, ballots from Ohio show that State opposed to the third term by a vote of 64 per cent to 36 per cent, the American Institute of Public Opinion announced today.

The Mississippi count—57 per cent to 43 per cent in favor of the third term—was reported yesterday.

The difference in opinion, according to Institute officials, may hinge on the fact that Mississippi overwhelmingly is for the Roosevelt Administration, whereas Ohio is very much of a doubtful State.

The Institute is preparing to report the current poll in full in a list of papers next Sunday.

Carelessness Fatal To 100,000 in U. S.

Chicago, June 11 (AP).—American carelessness in 1935 brought about a loss of 100,000 lives and sliced $3,450,000,000 from the total income, the National Safety Council reported today.

The council's averages showed 274 persons killed every day of the year by accidents. It estimated the total daily cost for lost income, doctors' bills, hospital fees and the overhead cost of insurance alone at $9,500,000.

Traffic fatalities, against which the council last January 1 began a five-year campaign of education after 1935's total climbed to a new all-time high of 37,000, were first among the causes of accidental death. Motor vehicle accidents also permanently disabled 105,000 persons and temporarily disabled 1,180,000.

Second most dangerous spot for Americans last year was the home.

"A total of 31,500 deaths in home accidents," the council said, "indicated members of American families, without apparent concern for loss of life, moved blithely about their homes—tumbling down stairs, falling out of windows, drowning themselves, getting cut and burned, dying by the thousands."

Home accidents permanently disabled 140,000; injured 4,460,000.

Minimum Wage Program and Marriage Clause Are Considered Greatest Recognition Ever Received From a Political Party.

By Agnes E. Meyer.

Cleveland, June 11.—The sunflowers of Kansas are growing bigger and bigger on the streets of Cleveland. The noise-indicating thermometer in the convention hall has collapsed from overexertion and whenever the chairman turns his back for a moment, the audience breaks out with another "Glory, Glory, Hallelujah."

In the midst of the excitement, which always surrounds the last-minute battles over the platform, it is becoming reasonably certain that two large groups will have cause for satisfaction, provided the Landon liberals hold the fort against the assault of Senator Borah on the proposed State's rights constitutional amendment. At this moment the now famous Room 816 at the Hollenden Hotel, where Gov. Landon's orders come over his private wire, is still the scene of lively combat, but it is fair to assume that the measures touching the interests of women and the young people of the country will not be greatly altered.

More Recognition.

The women of the country, and more particularly the wage-earning women, have never received more recognition from any political party. Those in the lowest income brackets will be protected by the plank which commits the Republicans to an effort for the re-establishment of the minimum wage under State supervision. The professional and other business women's groups will welcome as a triumph the plank for which every woman's organization has been pleading, with article 213 of the economy act in mind.

This provision as introduced reads: "We are opposed to legislation which will discriminate against women in Federal and State employment."

This latter measure affects some 5,000,000 women who are gainfully employed, for the elimination of married women from the Federal service has already tended to weaken the status of woman as a wage earner in private industry.

The very general fear which had invaded the feminist ranks that the Fascist attitude toward women is taking hold of America will be allayed by such a co-operative gesture from one of the major political parties.

The credit for this important feminist victory unquestionably goes to Miss Jane Todd, delegate from Westchester County, N. Y.

Not only did she persuade John Faber, member of the resolutions committee from New York, to submit the women's plank, but she also lobbied for the measure successfully among the other members, including Herman Longworthy, the Missouri chairman, and Henry J. Allen, one of Gov. Landon's advisers.

Opportunities Increased.

Only second in interest to women is the plank calling for the re-establishment and strengthening of the civil service. With the evils of patronage decreased and a purely competitive system prevailing in the field of Federal employment, women cannot but feel that their opportunities for useful service are greatly increased. But quite apart from their material interest in this plank, many organizations, including the League of Women Voters, have worked for such a measure with the general welfare of the country in mind.

As for the young voters, until the Landon influence began to be felt in the convention, their attitude toward the Republican Convention proceedings had been one varying between scorn and derision.

It has been experience to witness several sessions of the convention and the preliminary activities with several young people at my side. Their remarks gave a good indication of how this Republican show looks through the eyes of youth.

Oddly enough nothing has aroused the contempt of militant youth so much as the prayers with which the convention sessions are invariably opened. It must be admitted that a reverend clergyman praying fervently in a brilliant spotlight while the cameras click in every direction and the press representatives bang away industriously at their noisy typewriters is not an inspiring sight.

Furthermore these invocations to the Deity were so strongly political in character that one girl remarked to me, "The only impression I have gathered so far at this convention is that God seems to be a Republican."

The climax came this morning when the Bishop of Cleveland prayed that God might confound the oppressors of the land, a sentiment which received the hearty applause of the audience when the reverend bishop had said his amen.

Proceedings Dull.

Moreover, these college girls and boys cannot be swept off their feet by the old-fashioned clap-trap with which this convention fairly reeks. The opening proceedings struck them as intolerably dull.

Senator Steiwer's speech was regarded by these clear-headed youngsters as so much bushwah. As one of them in the lingo of the young expressed her opinion: "Steiwer has a shop-worn line that just doesn't go down any more. He is like the boys who have kissed the girls too often. He hasn't got anything left."

As for the speech of Bertrand Snell, this was met with a frank shout of healthy young laughter. Not knowing Mr. Snell, the younger convention visitors had their interest aroused by this remark of that veteran campaigner:

To older and wiser men this remark merely meant that "Bert" would even go radical if it happened to be the thing to do, but it aroused curiosity among the young and uninformed.

"We shall need especially the energy and idealism of youth," began Mr. Snell in his "message to youth." When he called them "the clear-eyed eager young men and women of America" they began to fidget perceptibly; when he said "you shall have jobs instead of the dole," they gave him a cautious applause, but when he climaxed, "You shall not see your savings and your life insurance policies made worthless by mounting Government deficits," the well-meaning minority leader of the House went into the discard with a thud. The problem of most young people today is obviously not the protection of their large incomes, but where to get jobs.

Leadership Felt.

When former President Hoover addressed the convention, most of his young hearers were swept off their feet by the magnificent reception which he received and by the earnestness with which he delivered his arraignment of the New Deal. Here at last they felt leadership and well-directed purpose, but even his high message imbued as it was with moral and spiritual vision, left these young thinkers but half convinced.

"It's all very well to criticize the New Deal," commented one Vassar senior. "We don't like the New Deal any more than Hoover does, but that doesn't get us anywhere. And as for moral and spiritual influences, the spiritual life is primarily founded upon economic well-being."

And now the attention of these intelligent students of the contemporary scene are fastening their hopes upon certain liberal passages which until now, are known to be a part of the Landon contributions to the platform. They are definitely pleased with the provisions in the relief plank for the rehabilitation and re-education of unemployed citizens whether young or old. But chiefly they like the simplicity not unmixed with shrewdness that characterizes the men in the Landon headquarters.

Kansans Teased.

This, however, did not prevent a certain young quartet—all of them of Republican parentage—from teasing the impetuous Kansans as they walked into the room and one of the Landonites asked the privilege of pinning a large sunflower on a brunette beauty.

"I couldn't think of it," she smiled back at him archly. "I'm for Roosevelt."

But even these hardened young realists cannot resist the charms of John Hamilton, the manager of the Landon campaign. He typifies successfully in their eyes the vigor, the intelligence and the enthusiasm of the whole Landon campaign.

If nothing unforeseen occurs to dim the rising ardor of these two important national groups, the women who are small or larger wage earners, and the insurgent youth movement, Landon will have as his strongest supporters the people who are supposed to be the deciding factions in the coming battle for the Presidency.

Text of Republican Party's Platform for 1936 Campaign

Security, Relief Plank Included In Declaration

Secret Trade Treaties and New Deal Spending Are Strongly Opposed.

America is in peril. The welfare of American men and women and the future of our youth are at stake. We dedicate ourselves to the preservation of their political liberty, their individual opportunity and their character as free citizens, which today for the first time are threatened by government itself.

For three long years the New Deal administration has dishonored American traditions and flagrantly betrayed the pledges upon which the Democratic Party sought and received public support.

The powers of Congress have been usurped by the President.

The integrity and authority of the Supreme Court have been flaunted.

The rights and liberties of American citizens have been violated.

Regulated monopoly has displaced free enterprise.

The New Deal administration constantly seeks to usurp the rights reserved to the States and to the people.

It has insisted on the passage of laws contrary to the Constitution.

It has intimidated witnesses and interfered with the right of petition.

It has dishonored our country by repudiating its most sacred obligations.

It has been guilty of frightful waste and extravagance, using public funds for partisan political purposes.

It has promoted investigations to harass and intimidate American citizens, at the same time denying investigations into its own improper expenditures.

It has created a vast multitude of new offices, filled them with its favorites, set up a centralized bureaucracy and sent out swarms of inspectors to harass our people.

It has bred fear and hesitation in commerce and industry, thus discouraging new enterprises, preventing employment and prolonging the depression.

It secretly has made tariff agreements with our foreign competitors, flooding our markets with foreign commodities.

It has coerced and intimidated voters by withholding relief to those opposing its tyrannical policies.

It has destroyed the morale of many of our people and made them dependent upon government.

Appeals to passion and class prejudice have replaced reason and tolerance.

To a free people, these actions are insufferable. This campaign cannot be waged on the traditional differences between the Republican and Democratic parties. The responsibility of this election transcends all previous political divisions. We invite all Americans, irrespective of party, to join us in defense of American institutions.

Constitutional Government and Free Enterprise.

We pledge ourselves:

1. To maintain the American system of constitutional and local self-government, and to resist all attempts to impair the authority of the Supreme Court of the United States, the final protector of the rights of our citizens against the arbitrary encroachments of the legislative and executive branches of government. There can be no individual liberty without an independent judiciary.

2. To preserve the American system of free enterprise, private competition, and equality of opportunity, and to seek its constant betterment in the interests of all.

Re-employment.

The only permanent solution of the unemployment problem is the absorption of the unemployed by industry and agriculture. To that end we advocate:

Removal of restrictions on production.

Abandonment of all New Deal policies that raise production costs, increase the cost of living, and thereby restrict buying, reduce volume and prevent re-employment.

Encouragement instead of hindrance to legitimate business.

Elimination of unnecessary and hampering regulations.

Adoption of such other policies as will furnish a chance for individual enterprise, industrial expansion, and the restoration of jobs.

Relief.

The necessities of life must be provided for the needy, and hope must be restored pending recovery. The administration of relief is a major failure of the New Deal. It has been faithless to those who most deserve our sympathy. To end confusion, partisanship, waste and incompetence, we pledge:

1. The return of responsibility for relief administration to nonpolitical local agencies familiar with community problems.

2. Federal grants-in-aid to the States and Territories while the need exists, upon compliance with these conditions: (a) a fair proportion of the total relief burden to be provided from the revenues of States and local governments; (b) all engaged in relief administration to be selected on the basis of merit and fitness; (c) adequate provision to be made for the encouragement of those persons who are trying to become self-supporting.

3. Undertaking of Federal public works only on their merits and separate from the administration of relief.

4. A prompt determination of the facts concerning relief and unemployment.

Security.

Real security will be possible only when our productive capacity is sufficient to furnish a decent standard of living for all American families and to provide a surplus for future needs and contingencies. For the attainment of that ultimate objective, we look to the energy, self-reliance and character of our people, and to our system of free enterprise.

Society has an obligation to promote the security of the people, by affording some measure of protection against involuntary unemployment and dependency in old age. The New Deal policies, while purporting to provide social security, have, in fact, endangered it.

We propose a system of old age security, based upon the following principles:

1. We approve a pay-as-you-go policy, which requires of each generation the support of the aged and the determination of what is just and adequate.

2. Every American citizen over 65 should receive the supplementary payment necessary to provide a minimum income sufficient to protect him or her from want.

3. Each State and Territory, upon complying with simple and general minimum standards, should receive from the Federal Government a graduated contribution in proportion to its own, up to a fixed maximum.

4. To make this program consistent with sound fiscal policy the Federal revenues for this purpose must be provided from the proceeds of a direct tax widely distributed. All will be benefitted and all should contribute.

We propose to encourage adoption by the States and Territories of honest and practical measures for meeting the problems of unemployment insurance.

The unemployment insurance and old age annuity sections of the present social security act are unworkable and deny benefits to about two-thirds of our adult population, including professional men and women and all those engaged in agriculture and domestic service, and the self employed while imposing heavy tax burdens upon all. The so-called reserve fund estimated at forty-seven billion dollars for old age insurance is no reserve at all, because the fund will contain nothing but the Government's promise to pay, while the taxes collected in the duse of premiums will be wasted by the Government in reckless and extravagant political schemes.

Labor.

The welfare of labor rests upon increased production and the prevention of exploitation. We pledge ourselves to:

Protect the right of labor to organize and to bargain collectively through representatives of its own choosing without interference from any source.

Support the adoption of State laws and interstate compacts to abolish sweatshops and child labor, and to protect women and children with respect to maximum hours, minimum wages and working conditions. We believe that this can be done within the Constitution as it now stands.

Agriculture.

The farm problem is an economic and social, not a partisan problem, and we propose to treat it accordingly. Following the wreck of the restrictive and coercive AAA, the New Deal Administration has taken to itself the principles of the Republican policy of soil conservation and land retirement. This action opens the way for a nonpolitical and permanent solution. Such a solution cannot be had under a New Deal administration which misuses the program to serve partisan ends, to promote scarcity and to limit by coercive methods the farmer's control over his own farm.

Our paramount object is to protest and foster the family type of farm, traditional in American life, and to promote policies which will bring about an adjustment of agriculture to meet the needs of domestic and foreign markets. As an emergency measure, during the agricultural depression, Federal benefit payments or grants-in-aid when administered within the means of the Federal Government are consistent with a balanced budget.

We propose:

1. To facilitate economical production and increased consumption on a basis of abundance instead of scarcity.

2. A national land-use program, including the acquisition of abandoned and nonproductive farm lands by voluntary sale or lease, subject to approval of the legislative and executive branches of the States concerned, and the devotion of such land to appropriate public use, such as watershed protection and flood prevention, reforestation, recreation and conservation of wild life.

3. That an agricultural policy be pursued for the protection and restoration of the land resources, designed to bring about such a balance between soil-building and soil-depleting crops as will permanently insure productivity, with reasonable benefits to co-operating farmers on family-type farms, but so regulated as to eliminate the New Deal's destructive policy toward the dairy and livestock industries.

4. To extend experimental aid to farmers developing new crops suited to our soil and climate.

5. To promote the industrial use of farm products by applied science.

6. To protect the American farmer against the importation of all livestock, dairy and agricultural products, substitutes therefor and derivatives therefrom, which will depress American farm prices.

7. To provide effective quarantine against imported livestock, dairy and other farm products from countries which do not impose health and sanitary regulations fully equal to those required of our own producers.

8. To provide for ample farm credit at rates as low as those enjoyed by other industries, including commodity and livestock loans, and preference in land loans to the farmer acquiring or refinancing a farm as a home.

9. To provide for decentralized, nonpartisan control of the Farm Credit Administration and the election by National Farm Loan associations of at least one-half of each board of directors of the Federal Land banks, and thereby remove these institutions from politics.

10. To provide in the case of agricultural products of which there are exportable surpluses the payment of reasonable benefits upon the domestically consumed portion of such crops in order to make the tariff effective. These payments are to be limited to the production level of the family-type farm.

11. To encourage and further develop co-operative marketing.

12. To furnish Government assistance in disposing of surpluses in foreign trade by bargaining for foreign markets selectively by countries both as to exports and imports. We strenuously oppose so-called reciprocal treaties which trade off the American farmer.

13. To give every reasonable assistance to producers in areas suffering from temporary disaster, so that they may regain and maintain a self-supporting status.

Tariff.

Nearly 60 per cent of all imports into the United States are now free of duty. The other 40 per cent of imports compete directly with the product of our industry. We would keep on the free list all products not grown or produced in the United States in commercial quantities. As to all commodities that commercially compete with our farms, our forests, our mines, our fisheries, our oil wells, our labor and our industries, sufficient protection should be maintained at all times to defend the American farmer and the American wage-earner from the destructive competition emanating from the subsidies of foreign governments and the imports from low-wage and depreciated-currency countries.

We will repeal the present reciprocal trade agreement law. It is futile and dangerous. Its effect on agriculture and industry has been destructive. Its continuation would work to the detriment of the wage-earner and the farmer.

We will restore the principle of the flexible tariff in order to meet changing economic conditions here and abroad and broaden by careful definition the powers of the Tariff Commission in order to extend this policy along nonpartisan lines.

We will adjust tariffs with a view to promoting international trade, the stabilization of currencies and the attainment of a proper balance between agriculture and industry.

We condemn the secret negotiation of reciprocal trade treaties without public hearing or legislative approval.

Monopolies.

A private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable. It menaces and, if continued, will utterly destroy constitutional government and the liberty of the citizen.

We favor the vigorous enforcement of the criminal laws, as well as the civil laws, against monopolies and trusts and their officials, and we demand the enactment of such additional legislation as is necessary to make it impossible for private monopoly to exist in the United States.

We will employ the full powers of the Government to the end that monopoly shall be eliminated and that free enterprise shall be fully restored and maintained.

Regulation of Business.

We recognize the existence of a field within which governmental regulation is desirable and salutary. The authority to regulate should be vested in an independent tribunal acting under clear and specific laws establishing definite standards. Their determinations on law and facts should be subject to review by the courts. We favor Federal regulation, within the Constitution, of the marketing of securities to protect investors. We favor also Federal regulation of the interstate activities of public utilities.

Civil Service.

Under the New Deal, official authority has been given to inexperienecd and incompetent persons. The civil service has been sacrificed to create a national political machine. As a result the Federal Government has never presented such a picture of confusion and inefficiency.

We pledge ourselves to the merit system, virtually destroyed by New Deal spoilsmen. It should be restored, improved and extended.

We will provide such conditions as offer an attractive permanent career in Government service to young men and women of ability, irrespective of party affiliations.

Government Finance.

The New Deal Administration has been characterized by shameful waste and general financial irresponsibility. It has piled deficit upon deficit. It threatens national bankruptcy and the destruction through inflation of insurance policies and savings bank deposits.

We pledge ourselves to:

Stop the folly of uncontrolled spending.

Balance the budget, not by increasing taxes, but by cutting expenditures, drastically and immediately.

Revise the Federal tax system and co-ordinate it with State and local tax systems.

Use the taxing power for raising revenue and not for punitive or political purposes.

We advocate a sound currency, to be preserved at all hazards.

We oppose further devaluation of the dollar.

We will restore to the Congress the authority lodged with it by the Constitution to coin money and regulate the value thereof by repealing all the laws delegating this authority to the Executive.

We will co-operate with other countries toward stabilization of currencies as soon as we can do so with due regard for our national interests and as soon as other nations have sufficient stability to justify such action.

Foreign Affairs.

We pledge ourselves to promote and maintain peace by all honorable means not leading to foreign alliances or political commitments.

Obedient to the traditional foreign policy of America and to the repeatedly expressed will of the American people, we pledge that America shall not become a member of the League of Nations nor of the World Court nor shall America take on any entangling alliances in foreign affairs.

We shall promote, as the best means of securing and maintaining peace by the pacific settlement of disputes, the great cause of international arbitration through the establishment of free, independent tribunals, which shall determine such disputes in accordance with law, equity and justice.

National Defense.

We favor an army and navy, including air forces, adequate for our national defense.

We will co-operate with other nations in the limitation of armaments and control of traffic in arms.

Bill of Rights.

We pledge ourselves to preserve, protect and defend, against all intimidation and threat, freedom of religion, speech, press and radio; and the right of assembly and petition and immunity from unreasonable searches and seizures.

We offer the abiding security of a government of laws as against the autocratic perils of a government of men.

1. We favor the construction by the Federal Government of headwater storage basins to prevent floods, subject to the approval of the legislative and executive branches of the government of the States whose lands are concerned.

2. We favor equal opportunity for our colored citizens. We pledge our protection of their economic status and personal safety. We will do our best to further their employment in the gainfully occupied life of America, particularly in private industry, agriculture, emergency agencies and the Civil Service.

We condemn the present New Deal policies which would regiment and ultimately eliminate the colored citizen from the country's productive life, and make him solely a ward of the Federal Government.

3. To our Indian population we pledge every effort on the part of the national Government to ameliorate living conditions for them.

4. We pledge continuation of the Republican policy of adequate compensation and care for veterans disabled in the service of our country and for their widows, orphans and dependents.

5. We shall use every effort to collect the war debt due us from foreign countries amounting to $12,000,000,000—one-third of our national debt. No effort has been made by the present Administration even to reopen negotiations.

6. We are opposed to legislation which discriminates against women in Federal and State employment.

Conclusion.

We assume the obligations and duties imposed upon government by modern conditions. We affirm our unalterable conviction that, in the future as in the past, the fate of the Nation will depend, not so much on the wisdom and power of government as on the character and virtue, self-reliance, industry and thrift of the people and on their willingness to meet the responsibilities essential to the preservation of a free society.

Finally, as our party affirmed in its first platform in 1856: "Believing that the spirit of our institutions as well as the Constitution of our country guarantees liberty of conscience and equality of rights among our citizens we oppose all legislation tending to impair them," and "we invite the affiliation and co-operation of the men of all parties, however differing from us in other respects, in support of the principles herein declared."

The acceptance of the nomination tendered by this convention carries with it, as a matter of private honor and public faith, an undertaking by each candidate to be true to the principles and program herein set forth.

Engineer at Pool Overcome by Gas

Jask Holden, 28, engineer in charge of equipment at the Takoma swimming pool, Fourth and Van Buren streets northwest, was made ill yesterday afternoon by chlorine gas leaking from a tank at the pool.

Holden had gone into the chlorine room to repair a leak in a gas pipe. Choking fumes forced him from the building, and pool attendants took him to Walter Reed Hospital. He returned to work following treatment.

CampaignFund Donations Soar To $1,000,000

Democrat Balance May 31 Is $299,074; Republican Reaches $220,856.

By the Associated Press.

More than $1,000,000 jingled into political collection boxes of various parties and causes during the past three months, with the count for some organizations yet to be recorded.

The precampaign financing was shown in statements filed yesterday with the House clerk under Federal law.

The Democratic National Committee recorded receipts of $260,691 for March, April and May, of which $81,019 was in direct contributions. The Democrats reported a balance of $299,074 on May 31, after paying out $188,918. Unpaid obligations of $174,765 were recorded.

Earlier, the Republican National Committee reported a $220,856 cash balance at the end of the quarter, without unpaid obligations. The Republicans reported income for the period of $792,405, of which contributions accounted for $435,-152.

Liberty League Statement.

Receipts listed by the American Liberty League totaled $124,247, and expenditures $156,901 for the three-month period. League headquarters announced this did not mean it had a deficit but—because it started in August, 1934, and had since then receipts of $834,922 and expenditures of $790,765—there was a May 31 balance of $44,157.

The National Union for Social Justice, headed by Father Charles E. Coughlin, of Detroit, reported contributions totaling $168,248, a $22,500 loan from the Radio League of the Little Flower and expenditures of $185,344.

Other organizations reporting included:

National Republican Congressional Committee—Receipts, $32,082; expenditures, $43,580.

Good Neighbor League, Inc., Washington—Receipts, $10,251, including a $2,000 loan from the Democratic National Committee; disbursements, $10,028, with $2,464 of unpaid obligations.

Coalition group of women, New York—Cash contributions, $6,008; expenditures, $2,735; unpaid pledges, $11,735.

Democrats' Loans Unpaid.

Democrats reported $77,376 in borrowed money unpaid, including $36,876 from Joseph P. Kennedy, of New York; $12,500 from M. L. Benedum, of Pittsburgh; $10,000 each from Howard Bruce, of Baltimore, and Robert B. Meyers, of New York, and $8,000 from R. H. Gore, of Chicago. ## 3 Editors Honored At Capital Dinner

Dr. Henry W. Bourne, retiring editor of the American Historical Review, and two editors of the Dictionary of American Biography, were given a dinner by friends last night at the Mayflower Hotel.

Dr. Dumas Malone and Dr. Harris E. Starr, editors of the dictionary, are retiring because their work of compiling the lexicon is nearly done. The last volume comes off the presses this year.

Speakers at the dinner, attended by 50 persons, were Robert Lincoln O'Brien, member of the Federal Tariff Commission, and Mgr. Peter Guilday, of Catholic University. William E. Dodd, Ambassador to Germany, was among the guests.

Delegates Applaud Prayer of Bishop Stressing Liberty

Cleveland, June 11.—Following is an excerpt from the prayer of Bishop Joseph Schrembs, of the Cleveland Catholic Diocese, which drew applause today from delegates to the Republican National Convention:

"O merciful Father, we have come to a crisis in our national life. There are dark clouds hovering over us and there are mighty currents and angry waves that threaten to wrench us from the safe and solid moorings established by the fathers of our Republic.

"This great convention of the Republican Party is gathered for the momentous task of proclaiming a national platform of principles and policy that will give promise of the enduring security of our civil and religious liberty, bought by the blood of millions and preserved by the sweat and the labors and sacrifices of generations; and of selecting a chieftain whose record of faithful service and a personality untarnished and untainted by the pollution of political corruption will fill the heart of America with the new hope of a second spring."

Barley Crop Light.

Hagerstown, Md., June 11—Harvesting Washington county's barley crop will be in full swing in a few days, farmers say. The crop, it is expected, will be under average owing to a recent drought.

Unyielding Everest.

As if to taunt Great Britain's most experienced climbers, the gods of Mount Everest beckoned them on by displaying an open way up its northern face and then made the approach to it quite impassable. An abnormally early monsoon so rotted the snow on the col leading to the summit that further hopes of crossing it this year have been abandoned.

Avalanches on Monday nearly carried away a reconnoitering team of two, one of whom had been elected for the final assault. Two years ago he and his partner had been able to crawl a bit above Camp No. 7 at 27,800 feet; this year no one went beyond Camp No. 4 at 23,000 feet. And the gods were outraged even at that. Frowning down from their 29,000-foot peak, they have driven the struggling party back to the comparative lowlands of the East Rongbuk Glacier after a few hours on the col.

Such is the outcome of two years of the most exhaustive planning and thorough training. The climbers this year were in every respect admitted to be the best prepared, physically and otherwise, that have yet attempted the feat. Members of earlier expeditions were included in the party and their experience coupled with the records of six previous attempts were expected to insure victory. But they didn't have a fighting chance.

Apparently the goal which Mallory and Irvine tried to reach at the cost of their lives is still far from attainment. It was in 1924 that Odell at Camp No. 7 saw the mists of the mountain swirl over these two climbers as they strained inch by inch towards the crest; they never were heard from again. The gods of the mountain quite evidently are not yet ready to yield so much as a few minutes' trespass in their last citadel. But they can not hold out forever.

The District's Thanks.

The Army orders which send two Assistant Engineer Commissioners on to new assignments deprive the District of two valued servants.

As principal assistant to Col. Sultan, Capt. H. F. Clark merits a considerable share in the debt of gratitude—too often unrecognized—which the city owes its engineering department. In particular, he has distinguished himself by his studies in refuse and garbage disposal, by his service as technical adviser to Lorton Reformatory and as chairman of the Commissioners' committee to inspect and revise if necessary Washington's long code of municipal regulations. Capt. R. E. York is entitled to credit for his investigations of the local water, sewer and highway systems and, most of all, for his planning, designing and construction of the new $4,000,000 sewage disposal plant.

From time to time question is raised as to the desirability of Army officers as municipal servants. Assuredly, there are certain disadvantages to the arrangement, one being the fact that their tours of duty here are usually limited to four years. As against these, however, their high professional qualifications coupled with their lack of political connections—both well exemplified in the service here of the two retiring officers—more than outweigh these considerations.

Co-ordinating Recreation.

As a result of last year's successful experiment, a new formula providing further co-ordination of Washington's recreation agencies is about to be put into operation. The Board of Education, having instructed its representative to vote favorably on the recreation committee's plan, the last indorsement has been obtained to assure its adoption. Commissioner Allen and Mr. Finnan, of the National Capital Parks office, the other two members of the committee, had already indicated their approval of the proposal.

Care was taken in draughting the plan as well as in its approval by school authorities to avoid subordination of any agency. The goal was co-ordination. So varied are the activities of the recreation and playground agencies of the city that some fear was expressed that any combination of effort might leave one agency in an inferior position. Particularly was this the feeling as regards the school recreation department.

With its supervised playgrounds, athletic fields, gymnasiums and theaters so closely knit into the school system, it was properly argued that the schools must retain control over their playgrounds for activities connected with their curricula. The fact, however, that the Board of Education made only a few minor changes in the co-ordination plan indicates that it would not permit encroachment upon the recreation program of the schools.

No unification of personnel but only co-ordination of all activities for the benefit of the community is contemplated in the new plan. Certainly every recreational agency in Washington can give its full support to this objective.

The G. O. P. Candidate.

Selection of Gov. Landon as the 1936 Republican standard-bearer is one of the most remarkable victories in the history of American politics. The chief executive of Kansas literally sprang into national prominence during the last two years. Yet he was so emphatically the choice of Republican voters that opposition to him almost completely disappeared before a nominating speech could be made.

The outcome is not solely a compliment to Gov. Landon, however. His conduct has been both skillful and dignified. The campaign in his behalf has been conducted with exceptionally good judgment. And apparently his temperament is well adapted to the mood of voters seeking an alternative to the New Deal. But still other factors enter into his rise to unquestioned leadership of his party.

Not the least of these is the regeneration of the party itself. When the delegates began assembling at Cleveland it was not yet certain that Mr. Landon would be placed at the head of the ticket. Unquestionably, he was the leading candidate, but large blocks of delegates had not then decided to support him. Under strategy that has too often been employed by the G. O. P. in previous conventions his nomination might have been blocked. But a new spirit had taken hold of the Republicans at Cleveland. Old Guard cliques accustomed to decide the fate of candidates in "smoke-filled rooms" very clearly lost their leadership to younger groups more willing to heed the wishes of the rank and file.

Three events, all indicative of the new spirit that is actuating the G. O. P., made the nomination of Mr. Landon a certainty. One was the caucus of the New York delegation, signifying the surrender of the Old Guard to new leadership. Another was the address of former President Hoover, which provided a link between the best of the party's traditions and the new idealism identified with Gov. Landon. More than anything else that happened during the convention this speech symbolized the attitude of the new party which is emerging from the broken fragments of the former G. O. P.

The third element behind this almost unanimous indorsement of Gov. Landon was the real desire on the part of the leaders and delegates to present a united front. That feeling was pointedly voiced by Col. Knox in releasing the delegates pledged to him. No doubt Senator Vandenberg, who led the movement of withdrawal from the race, Senator Borah and other candidates were actuated by similar motives. More than at any time in recent years the Republican Party is united in a common objective—the defeat of President Roosevelt.

Gov. Landon has been chosen as the spearhead of that fight, not merely because of his personal qualifications, but also because he is the strongest candidate that could have been placed in the field against the New Deal. In a very real sense the campaign which he will lead will be a party effort. Indeed, it may be broader than a party effort because of the attitude of Jeffersonian Democrats who have lost confidence in the present Administration.

At least so far as their candidate for the Presidency is concerned, Republicans may depart from Cleveland with assurance that they have chosen wisely.

Better, But Not Good.

The much revised Robinson-Patman anti-price discrimination bill has come out of conference shorn of some of its most objectionable features, and it will probably become law before the end of the session.

It is still evident that the evils of loss leader selling, discriminatory rebates and similar practices at which this measure is aimed could be reached more effectively and more intelligently through voluntary action. Under the circumstances, however, chief interest centers in the extreme difficulty of the task that the proposed law would impose upon Federal administrative officials. For the bill will involve some intricate problems of interpretation and will certainly lead to litigation in the courts.

There is some hope that the very obscurities and complexities that create such formidable enforcement problems for the Federal Trade Commission will encourage that body to seek the co-operation of trade associations representing the industries affected by the new regulations. The task of deciding, for example, whether discriminations in price are justified in order to meet competition requires an intimate and extensive knowledge of trade practices and pricing policies. In view of the infinite variety of practices and the countless avenues of evasion open to business organizations, the Federal authorities will, in any case, have their hands full, first to decide what the law means in specific cases and then to identify and discipline firms that fail to comply with it.

Checking Up On Japan.

It remains to be seen what will be the effect of the representations Anthony Eden, the British foreign secretary, has made to Japan against that nation's alleged connivance in the North China smuggling traffic.

Since Great Britain is not likely to do more than protest, the British demarche at Tokyo may result in little more than another denial by Japan that it is in any sense a party to the illegal traffic which is flooding China with goods from Manchukuo and Japan without paying the regular duties.

This stand is plainly lacking in candor. Not only is the so-called autonomous eastern Hopei regime, the principal center of smuggling activities in North China, a purely Japanese invention supported by Japanese bayonets; not only does Japan stand in the way of all efforts by the Chinese Maritime Customs to block that traffic, but, in addition, the Japanese military leaders at Tientsin and Peiping have gone so far as to warn Nanking not to put into effect its proposed drastic anti-smuggling measures.

It is as plain as a pikestaff that smuggling in North China could be greatly reduced and possibly wiped out altogether if the Japanese were inclined to co-operate with the Chinese authorities. It is equally plain that they do not want to do so, first because smuggling makes it possible for Japanese producers and middlemen to undersell British, American and other rivals, and, secondly, because they believe that by depriving the Nanking regime of indispensable revenues that government will be forced to capitulate to Japan.

But whether or not Great Britain receives any satisfaction from Japan, it is interesting to note the direct contrast between its present attitude toward the island empire and the complacent view that prevailed in 1931 and 1932 when Japan was overrunning Manchuria.

It did not then occur to those British Tories who were inclined to applaud Japanese aggression, that the conquest of Manchuria would sooner or later lead to an attempt to extend Japan's influence over all of North China and thus directly endanger British interests in that country. Now their change of heart toward Britain's former ally in the Far East comes rather late in the day. It is questionable whether mere protests from London will persuade the Japanese to abandon a course which, however monstrous from the viewpoint of international morality, seems to hold enormous advantages for the island empire.

Milestones.

The milestone which told ladies and gents, dandies and tramps of nineteenth century little old New York that it was "Four Miles to City Hall" has been retired to dustier fields. Yesterday Manhattan's borough president presented it to the city. This weather-beaten marker, which used to instruct travelers at the corner of Fifty-seventh street and Third avenue, has looked upon its last street scene. For the rest of its brownstone life, the milestone will be gazed upon by sightseers who have no need of its aid.

Around 1767, when the first milestones were erected in New York, the tiny burg which was to become America's largest city was beginning to feel growing pains. David Douglass was thrilling theatergoers with the first performance of Hamlet to be given in that locale. An increasing number of boats cluttered up the harbor and "foreigners" from the West and South had already started to migrate toward the island city.

These milestones and subsequent ones stood unnoticed while Sons of Liberty and British soldiers engaged in street-fighting after repeal of the stamp act. They were a source of information when citizens crowded the city to see Washington inaugurated at Federal Hall. They pointed the way to Castle Garden, where P. T. Barnum's importation, the exquisite Jenny Lind, was thrilling thousands. They have seen horse-drawn carriages give way to street cars, buses, automobiles. They have seen men and women's clothes evolve from the ridiculous to the sublime and back again.

In the museum these favored markers will not be exposed to the tricks that automobiles, subways and airplanes have played upon milestones everywhere. But even there they will serve as sign posts indicating the inexorable march of time.

A Baltimore illustrator says men are better looking than women. Of course! And men are well aware of this fact, else they would resort to permanents, dyes, paints, powder, rainbow-hued clothing and other artifices to compensate for the bungling of nature.

Our Convention Reporting.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am writing this letter, not as a Republican, but instead as a reader of The Post for a good many years. Because I have always thought your paper one of the fairest and best informed newspapers in the city, if indeed, not the entire country as well. Your writers have always been among my favorites and I took pleasure in thinking that here at least was one paper that allowed its men to give their own opinion, instead of the publisher's.

However, I can't help but feel that so far, at least, your whole description of the Republican National Convention smells to high heaven. It would seem that for some reason or other the order has gone out for your staff to unite in panning the party and its convention. I would not say this if but a few of your writers did so, for then it would seem that was only their personal viewpoint, but when the whole paper leans over backward to be unfair and, from a glance at other reports of the convention proceedings, it would seem that your stories are not only unfair, but groundless and untruthful as well.

For one thing we might consider the manner in which your men seemed to take pleasure in attacking as dull, uninteresting and faulty the speech made by the keynoter, Senator Steiwer. Their descriptions, to say the least, do not check with the vast majority of the other papers which seem to agree that here was a speech that was one of the finest of a political nature that has been made in recent years. In fact, all one had to do to realize that your reports of it were unfair and untruthful was to have listened to the speech on the radio. When your men go out of their way to say that it did not catch the enthusiasm of the convention, it makes one wonder if they were there at all, or if they wrote their stories with their tongue in their cheek and their instructions in their mind.

That you and your writers might not care for the convention is understandable, but that in your hate you should go so far out of your way in reporting its proceednigs as to be downright untruthful, is deplorable.

This is the first time that I have ever felt that such criticism is in order for your paper and I hope that I won't ever have to make such a charge again.

EDWARD C. JOHNSON.
Washington, June 10.

The G. A. O.'s Authority.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Of far greater importance than the appointment of a successor to the Comptroller General, is the question whether the G. A. O. should be discarded as superfluous, as was the Bureau of Efficiency shortly after the President assumed Executive authority.

The G. A. O. was instituted on at most two presumptions: first, that the various departments and bureaus were incompetent to audit their own accounts; or second, that deliberate misuse of funds was possible without detection. It was presumed that an independent audit would arrest or prevent irresponsible behavior in the handling of public funds.

Intelligent and interested citizens are seriously wondering who is the final authority in the meaning and application of law. There is doubt whether such authority rests with the Congress, the Supreme Court or the Comptroller General. It is time that final authority were lodged somewhere to avoid suspicion and confusion.

Intimate knowledge of the policy of making promotions with enormously increased pay in the G. A. O. reveal the most flagrant violation of the "merit and efficiency" rule which is presumed to be the basis of promotion in civil service.

The Government should be a model employer, but not in the sense of wanton extravagance in the use of entrusted funds, through stupidity and malpractice, but through genuine merit and efficiency, and above all by employing the largest possible number of persons to perform social services, with adequate but not excessive wages.

EDWIN EVANS.
Forestville, Md., June 9.

More On "Tobacco Road."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Just a few words, if you please, in regard to the verbose defense of "the merits of Tobacco Road" which appeared in The Post of June 9.

Plays are not written for the noble purpose ascribed to them by the writer of the article nor with the hope of bettering any existing social conditions. They are written to make a hit on Broadway and to fill the pockets of authors and managers. My 20 years on the stage makes my knowledge of the subject empirical and in my opinion, any authors, actors or managers who lend themselves to such filth as "Tobacco Road," no matter under what guise, simply prostitute themselves. This goes also for critics who defend the play. CLAUS BOGEL.
Washington, June 9.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The reply in your columns, June 8, of "H. S." to "E. B. S." anent "Tobacco Road" was commendable. Those who have been trained to read a literature and bibliography deleted, censored and glossed over by authors and publishers to meet with acceptance for sale, will naturally resent public display of the life of people who live like dogs. I have seen real life drama among some Negroes and poor whites in Georgia, South Carolina and even in Virginia, where schools are poor and wages are low, that makes "Tobacco Road" a fairly decent habitat.

Protest of the drama because of some of its vulgar dialogues and display of the natural mating instinct or because it disturbs one's private sense of racial superiority is based largely upon ignorance, the smugness of a protected life in a cultural environment or because of a sense of unadjusted race pride.

The end results to the individual after witnessing "Tobacco Road" and "Green Pastures" should be greater tolerance, less selfishness, more sympathy and attitudes and acts of social helpfulness. "Tobacco Road" should go far in preparing the American mass mind for a real "New Deal." E. B. HENDERSON.
Washington, June 8.

Teaching Citizenship.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Before the war patriotic rituals were not common in schools and our patriotism was probably at as high a level as now. At least, when the World War came the American people went to war and did everything that a patriotic people were supposed to do. But what a joke last year when Congress virtually repudiated our much-advertized and high-sounding motives for going into the war, and voted that we should not sell to warring nations because it did not want our avarice for trade to get us into another war.

Even though the American people have repudiated their part in the World War, they have not repudiated some of the methods which came out of the war. After the war we started to make a more superficially patriotic and better citizenry. Courses in citizenship and character training were added to our school curricula. But what has been the result? Before the war children went to school fewer years than now and consequently left school earlier. Most criminals were adults, which meant that it took many years from the time a child left school for him to become a criminal. Now children get so much citizenship and character training in school that many of our criminals start their careers soon after leaving school.

Many of the teaching profession believe that the direct method of teaching citizenship and character is of very doubtful value, and can even be harmful in building up dishonest and deceitful attitudes. The experience of the past 20 years certainly seems to bear out this belief. O. V. MIRETON.
Clarendon, Va., June 10.

Chevy Chase Poll.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Since this is take-a-poll season I took one the night Steiwer's "keynut" speech put me in stitches for the first few minutes. At about the time I figured Steiwer would be saving the country for the fourth time I took "Tobey," my cocker spaniel, out for a walk.

There are eight houses in my block and in only one of them was the radio going. In three of them the lights were out so I guess the folks had gone to bed. At this time Steiwer was going good according to the one radio I could hear.

Politics does strange things to some people. Can you imagine Steiwer taking a rap at the CCC after four years of breadlines under Hoover? Can you imagine a man talking about economy and voting to override the President on the veto of the bonus bill? Can you imagine a man talking about proceeding under the Constitution when he voted for the NRA, the AAA, and the Frazier-Lemke farm moratorium act, all declared unconstitutional?

Steiwer talked about "honest money," yet the record shows he voted the Thomas amendment which gave the President devaluation and inflationary powers, and voted to pay the bonus by issuing greenbacks, and he voted for the Wheeler 16-to-1 proposition.

So I took a poll all my own. Maybe it shows some of the folks are getting wise, what?

R. T. EDWARDS.
Chevy Chase, Md., June 10.

Note To Fairfax.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Apropros of the embarrassing position in which Washington's historic neighbor finds itself with no candidate for the office of mayor, I wish to tell of a town in Illinois of which I was a resident in my youth.

This town paid its mayor a salary of 50 cents a year and each alderman the sum of 25 cents. There was much civic pride and the best men of the town were candidates for these offices.

The annual town meeting, held in May, was attended by the citizens and the mayor gave a report of his administration, then he returned his "munificent salary" to the city treasury. Each alderman in turn told of the principal events of his ward and returned his salary to the city.

Any citizen was privileged to address the assembly and commendations and criticisms were freely made. In one May meeting a motion was offered that the salary of the mayor be increased to $1.00 a year and the aldermen to 50 cents. This caused wild excitement and the cry was raised that this was only "an opening wedge" and soon the city would be saddled with a debt. The motion was overwhelmingly defeated.

Not salary but service was the inspiration and reward for the honored members of the city council. C. K. M.
Washington, June 9.

Australia's Experience.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The idea to "try something" and if it doesn't work "try something else" (in other words, keep moving) which has so frequently been advocated by President Roosevelt, rather reminds us of the Mad Hatter tea party when the guests kept moving around and around without getting anywhere.

Effort is commendable, but when based on the theory that prosperity can be restored by trying to harness the moonbeams at Passamaquoddy at the expense of the taxpayers' money, not to mention hosts of other blind experiments, thinking people will question the sanity of such activities.

Not so long ago Australia tried to spend its way out of trouble. Vast sums were appropriated for "public works," armies went smilingly to jobs, and all was rosy and golden for a while. In the end, when the gold gave out, the whole scheme collapsed, as the foundation was insecure and economic law had been violated. Can Uncle Sam violate the same law and get away with it? The future will decide.

Versatile M. Lubitsch

IN a suite near the French delegates at the Savoy Hotel, surrounded—for it is his honeymoon—with banks of spring flowers, is a little, dark, swift-eyed man who has possibly done more for the cinema than any film director living.

Lubitsch is a man whom time and circumstances have never beaten. All his career has been a story of experiment and adaptation. His style has changed from spectacle to tragedy, from tragedy to burlesque, from burlesque to musical romance, from romance to melodrama, from melodrama to satire, with equal versatility. Twice in his work he has come up against a major crisis—once when he moved from Berlin to Hollywood, once when sound revolutionized the industry—and each time he emerged successfully and with an added zest.

* * * *

"I have always enjoyed myself in pictures," he says simply. "Yes, there has been fun and tragedy in my life, but mostly fun."

He speaks to you quick and eagerly, in good working American with a German rotundity. His "Yes," is a rich mixture of the American "Yeah" and the German "Ja." His eye is always cocked for humor. I have never seen him without a cigar.

He is, in an interview, a great ragger, mainly, I think, as a defense against the indiscretions of the genus reporter. If you can get under his guard with a quick one, he likes you for it. He is ready with the right answer, but his eyes gleam with pleasure at the challenge. A talk with Ernst Lubitsch is a fine spar.

"In America," he told me, smoking his cigar among the tulips, "you must have humor. You can put over the most serious drama if it is salted with humor. You must learn to laugh at things. That is where so many European directors have made their mistake in Hollywood."

"Like Dupont and Sjostrom?" I asked, quickly.

But he was ready.

"Like nobody in particular. But it is an essential condition of film-making. And you must move with the times—never fight against new technical conditions."

"Meaning," I said, "that you must now make films in color?"

"Of course we shall have to make films in color. As soon as I get back to Hollywood, I shall experiment with more color pictures for Paramount. The thing is inevitable. Presently, all films will be in color, though I don't know when. Five years? Three years? Perhaps sooner. I can't say."

"And then stereoscopy?"

"And then stereoscopy."

"And then television?"

"And then television."

"And then what?"

"Ah, what! But does it matter? We look ahead too much. We are always worrying about what will happen in ten, twenty years' time. What will happen, must happen. We can't change it, and we can't expedite it. The only thing is to accept changing conditions as they come, and in the meantime make the best of what we have today."

* * * *

"I wish you would guess," I said. "Guess at least what will be England's position in the film industry."

"England? England has a great chance. London right now is the center of European production. If the English producers aren't dazzled by talk of millions, and overbuild, spending vast sums on studios they can't staff, they are—what do you call it?—in a sweet spot. The three biggest stars of last year, you remember, were all English — Laughton, Donat, Merle Oberon——"

"All Korda's discoveries," I murmured wickedly.

"All great stars," he amended with a twinkle. "And characteristic of changing taste. Ten years ago a star like Charles Laughton could not have been popular. The public wanted pretty heroes. Today they are beginning to understand great acting."

"A happy thought for a finale," I said. "You really think that public taste is improving?"

"Ja. Assuredly. They will not stand any longer for exhibitions of mugging. Do you have that word in English?"

"We understand it," I said sadly, and rose to go. At the door I turned. I could not resist it.

"Mr. Lubitsch," I asked, "how did you come to make that one terrible, really terrible pitcure? Eternal——"

"Sh!" he said, looking 'round him, finger on lip. "I had hoped no one would remember. It was so long ago, eight years or more. You really remember it? Confound you! I will tell you something. I was in New York with my assistant for the premiere. I saw the final copy. I said to my assistant, 'Be prepared, we leave town Wednesday." He said, 'Why? The film will not be shown till Thursday.' I told him, 'Ja, therefore we leave town Wednesday.' Couldn't we agree to forget it?"

"Mr. Lubitsch," I assured him, "from now onward, so far as I am concerned, Eternal Love has never been made."

Microphone Oratory.

Cleveland.

There are those who thought Senator Fred Steiwer, of Oregon, delivered the keynote speech of the Republican Convention with all the oratorical grace and fire of a ventriloquist's dummy, and you may count me as one of them. I hasten to add, however, in justice to the Oregon statesman, that the mere delivery of a cold, impersonal document, as formal as a chattel mortgage, has been greatly exaggerated. It isn't fair to expect a statesman to do a Hamlet with such material, and if they wanted someone to chew the scenery they should have hired an actor. Steiwer performed under a severe handicap. They gave him no good lines to speak and then cramped him with mechanical limitations.

I don't think we can look forward to any real forensics in this campaign, because the speaker nowadays is compelled to stand perfectly still, maintaining an exact distance from the microphone, in order to catch the radio audience. He cannot fling his arms or swing by his tail in the manner of the old-fashioned Fourth of July spellbinder.

This mechanized oratory is no good at best, and then the gadgets go haywire, as they did in Senator Steiwer's big moment. The speaker is reduced to a ridiculous whisper.

I doubt that William Jennings Bryan himself could have made himself heard throughout the Cleveland hall without the amplifying system.

* * * *

This year the speaker stands in the middle of the hall, out at the end of a long flying bridge, and there is as much distance behind us in front of him. Moreover, the area behind him is a theater with a high, arched roof, which seems to trap sound and smother it.

Twelve years ago when the Republicans were nominating Coolidge they possessed among their number the loudest orator in the United States, the late Senator Frank Willis, of Ohio. At that time the end wall of the arena was just back of the present speaker's stand, and it served as a sounding board. Senator Willis gave a magnificent display of noise in casting Ohio's vote for Mr. Coolidge, but even he might sound faint if he could test himself against the vastness and the acoustics of the hall as it is today. Incidentally, although Senator Willis could outbawl any hog-caller in the country in his day, it is not recorded that he ever said anything, so mere power can be exaggerated.

The microphone technique has completely changed the art of oratory. Perhaps it has destroyed it. In order to deliver a speech with grace and vigor a speaker must be allowed to get hot and put his body into it. He must sway with the feeling of his stuff. He must reach for the sky when he is calling on God to help him turn the rascals out and save the country. He must be allowed to bend forward and reach out confidentially to his audience in certain moments, and he requires a wide range of tones, from the mighty bellow and the screams of defiance to the low, poetic murmur when dealing with the rocks and hills of his boyhood.

All this is denied him by the engineers in charge of the electrical gadgets. They tell him the precise spot on which to plant his feet, warning him not to move, because if he draws away too far he loses his audience and if he comes too close his voice grows mushy and indistinct. That gives him no more cruising radius than the stretch of his own neck and rules out one of the most important factors in any good public address, the physical sway of the speaker. But the gadget demands something else. They ask a man to keep his voice close to a certain pitch for mechanical reasons, and this makes for his neck sounds and monotony.

That is the explanation of the horrible quality of all radio lectures, from the daily household chat to the sad flop of Senator Steiwer, of Oregon. The speaker of today does not address his immediate audience, but talks into a can for the benefit of that element bewitchingly described as the vast unseen multitude. Few men have been able to conquer the limitations of the can. Huey Long did, and some people think Mr. Roosevelt has style and conviction on the air, but I say he sounds like a schoolboy reciting "Paul Revere" without gestures. He reminds me of the man who says cigarettes are good for sore throat, and the more he wheedles the worse I like it.

But, after all, Senator Steiwer got his piece spoken, and I don't think it should make any difference to intelligent voters whether he did it like a man taking inventory in a drug story or in the spread-eagle fashion of a tailboard professor selling corn salve and wart remover.

But there I go, assuming that there are enough intelligent voters to amount to something, and I musn't be naive.

G. O. P. Gives Farmers Policy of 'Land-Use'

Most Efficient Utilization of Resources to Supplant 'Plow-Under' Practice of Present Administration Proposed.

By Felix Morley,

Cleveland, June 11.—In adoption of an economy plank on agricultural policy, the Republican Party has taken one of the highest hurdles which confronted it at Cleveland. Moreover, it has taken this hurdle in a way which to farm representatives here augurs well for the outcome of the race against the Administration's subsidized crop reduction program as seen by the G. O. P. It is an obstacle race between two very different theories of farm relief, the winner to be decided in November by the voters of the all-important agricultural States.

As now presented, the farm policies of the Democratic and Republican Parties are dissimilar, though perhaps not to the extent that the G. O. P. platform asserts in proposing to avoid partisanship in the issue. The differences are revealed by examination of the farm plank presented to the convention here tonight.

Its objective is said to be protection and fostering of the self-sustaining family type of farm, with the implication that taxation differentials might possibly be applied to further this end. The A.A.A. it is intimated, has operated to stabilize the pre-existing agricultural situation, without any preference for self-sustaining farms.

"Land-Use" Program Offered.

On the contrary, as benefit payment records have revealed, the big, mechanized one-crop farm has frequently profited much more heavily than the independent farmer.

In contrast with the subsidized crop-reduction program, the Republican platform now offers what is called "a national land use program," the emphasis being on the most efficient utilization of agricultural resources instead of the negative "plow-under" procedure. It is admitted that recent Administration policy "opens the way" for the permanent solution the G. O. P. claims to seek.

The platform avoids details as to how that "land-use" program would operate. But experts here point out that in the hundreds of millions of acres actually or potentially controlled by the Federal Government there is a leverage which might be effectively employed to curtail present subsidies. If part of this land were kept out of cultivation except as needed, and if grazing rights upon it were more closely restricted than at present, it is argued that production on privately owned land would not need governmental control of the AAA type. And if the control were not needed, the subsidies which are the price of control could be abandoned.

Private Rights an Issue.

Among the framers of the program there is admitted doubt as to the political and economic desirability of interfering with existing private rights on the Government domain. It is easier in theory than in practice to say that the millions of heads of livestock now pasturing on public grazing lands should be forced onto private pasturage, thus automatically occupying unprofitable private acreage and doing away with the necessity of further crop-restriction payments. But a moderate start in this direction is what the land-use advocates have in mind.

The Republican farm plank, however, does not attempt to abandon farm subsidies altogether. At the risk of laying itself open to caustic Democratic comment, it asserts that "as an emergency measure, during the agricultural depression, Federal benefit payments or grants-in-aid, when administered within the means of the Federal Government, are consistent with a balanced budget."

Much more questionable is the proposal to subsidize experimental crops not now grown commercially in this country and perhaps to give encouragement to what is known as chemurgic farming—the development of crops deemed to be capable of industrial utilization, such as fuel alcohol from corn, oil from Jerusalem artichokes and plastic from soy beans. This part of the plank is being sharply criticized on the reasonable assumption that farmers need not be subsidized to grow crops for which there is any attested industrial demand.

Vague on Expo. Problem.

On the question of the diminishing export market for American agriculture the platform is vague to the point of uncertainty. It flirts with the idea of subsidized exports, but in so hesitant a way that this dubious device, certain to bring reprisals from countries which would resent the dumping of our farm produce, can scarcely yet be called settled Republican policy. The correlative issue of the protection of the American market is much more definitely indorsed.

The platform comes out flatly against the Administration's reciprocal tariff policy, and reiterates this opposition in the farm plank, though somewhat paradoxically this indorses "bargaining for foreign markets selectively by countries, both as to exports and imports."

Perhaps the most marked difference between the Republican and Democratic farm policies is the underlying effort of the former to break away from the direct relationship of benefactor and beneficiary which the Roosevelt Administration has established. The farm plank presented here tonight urges the further development of co-operative marketing together with the provision of "ample farm credit" and loans at rates as low as those enjoyed by other industries.

In both cases assistance to agricultural self-help organizations rather than direct assistance to the individual farmer is stressed. There is no trace of any inflationary mortgage refinancing. There is specific demand for decentralization of governmental farm agencies, to "remove these institutions from politics."

Those who have co-operated with Gov. Landon in drafting this most difficult plank subject to influences of many kinds from many sources, claim to be satisfied that they have not compromised with Mr. Hoover's demand that "the advance of collectivism and its inevitable tyranny" be abandoned.

Less Government Seen.

Less Government in farming is certainly foreshadowed by this plank of the Republican platform. It has been hard to secure it, and in the securing compromises have been made. Obviously it is politically difficult to turn back sharply on a subsidy policy. But the turn has been made, apparently in honest realization that an economy program must economize, and that to be worthy of the name it must apply to governmental expenditures for agricultural as well as for other purposes.

Moreover, it is the belief of Gov. Landon's technicians here that the "non-political" economy program in agriculture is also the program most in the farmers' long-range interest. And they seem to be convinced that this is the dominant belief among the farmers themselves.

Thomas, Near Tears, Resigns Commons Seat

Darkest Hour in His Life, He Says; Close Friend Also Quits.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 11.—James Henry Thomas, forced out of Britain's cabinet because he was accused of telling budget secrets, stepped out of public life today in a scene full of emotion.

Trembling, near to tears, protesting again his innocence, the former colonial secretary resigned his seat in Commons and said he would not try to regain it.

This, he told the vast and silent parliamentary chamber, was "the darkest hour of my life."

A moment later Sir Alfred Butt, Thomas' close friend, both in Parliament and on the race track, also resigned. He joined "Dress Shirt Jim" in denying the accusation of a judicial tribunal that he received budget tax information from Thomas and used it for "private gain;" and he sharply rapped the government for not giving him a chance to prove he was innocent.

The ancient House of Commons witnessed its most emotional moments in years when Thomas, once an engine wiper, closed his 26 years of Parliamentary service.

After he and Sir Alfred, following traditional procedure, had bowed low to the speaker and left the chamber, Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin arose.

In a choked voice he reminded the house that neither man was charged with a criminal offense.

Then he spoke bitterly of the "merciless publicity" which both had received and told the members:

"They are paying the penalty, in full.

"Let us hope we may never take part in so painful a scene in this house again.

"In my view, expiation in full has been made.

"There is no appeal from the findings. Whatever stigma there is remains for all time with no possibility of appeal."

Bonus Delivery At Homes Only, Burke Declares

Veterans Cannot Receive Certificates at Jobs; Banks Co-operate.

Spiking reports that bonus bonds will be delivered to veterans employed in various branches of the Government at their downtown offices next week, Postmaster Vincent C. Burke announced yesterday that all bonds will be distributed to residence addresses only—except in cases where former service men are now confined to hospitals or assigned to military stations.

"There appears to be a mistaken impression," Burke declared. "Bond deliveries will begin Monday night—but to home addresses only. During the week, however, certifying officers will visit Government departments and business houses to certify bonds for veterans who desire immediate redemption. These certifying officers will make no bond deliveries."

In cases where veterans are hospitalized or stationed for duty at Army or Navy posts, deliveries will begin Monday morning, prior to the regular distribution time, Burke added.

After surrendering his bonds to a postoffice certifying officer for cash redemption, Burke said, the veteran will receive a check within 48 hours. The local postoffice has been designated as a "paying office" and will issue checks under this system.

Must Establish Identity.

Each veteran who desires to surrender his bonds for cash must establish his identity to the satisfaction of postal authorities, Burke asserted. In order to hasten work, Burke urged all veterans to prepare proper identifications.

Meanwhile, Washington banks have agreed to co-operate under President Roosevelt's plea that veterans' checks be cashed "promptly and in full."

Comprehensive plans have been completed to make it as easy and simple as possible for veterans to receive cash for their bonds and checks, Karl W. Corby, president of the District Bankers Association, declared yesterday.

Each veteran applying at a local bank for cash will be asked to fill out a "signature card." On this card will be the applicant's signature, age, address and other information, including the numbers of the bonds he desires to cash.

Again the veteran will be requested to produce proper identification. If he is known at the bank, no further identification will be necessary. But if he is not, another person, who is acquainted at the institution, must accompany him. The signature of the identifying person will be added to the veteran's card.

Banks to Certify Bonds.

After the card has been filled out, the veteran will reecive a receipt showing the bonds have been received and have been forwarded by the bank to the Government for redemption. Through this procedure, the bank will certify all bonds.

The veteran will then receive a check from the Treasurer of the United States for the full value of the bonds he surrendered. He may then present this check to the bank where his signature card is on file and receive cash.

of Schools Frank W. Ballou advised, would relieve only the Paul Junior High School and leave untouched the MacFarland Junior High School.

In rejecting the committee's recommendation against the purchase of the Adams Mill road site, Dr. Ballou urged that the Commissioners request the transfer of a portion of the Zoological grounds to make the cemetery site adequate. The saving effected by the use of the Zoological grounds would offset the saving proposed by the Commissioners through the use of the United States reservation, and which the finance committee rejected.

Despite the fact that the fate of the 1937 budget is still hanging fire with no signs of agreement between the Senate and House conferees, the board's finance committee yesterday proceeded to lay down five general principles for the preparation of the 1938 budget.

These were that all items requested in the 1937 budget and eliminated be placed in the new budget; that the budget as prepared "substantially meet the existing needs of the school system;" that one-fifth of the proposed five-year school building program be carried in each of the appropriations bills for the next five years; that purchase of land items be included at least one year before construction is contemplated; that the officers continue the policy of "undertaking to recover the ground lost in securing appropriations during the period of the depression."

The plan was said to have been presented orally to the new premier, Leon Blum.

Schacht Off to Belgrade.

Observers believed he is preparing for a report for Reichsfuehrer Hitler as to feasibility of closer co-operation in both the political and economic field between Germany and Rome pact states (Italy, Austria and Hungary).

Schacht was in an all-night conference with several business leaders of Austria. In Belgrade he will discuss Germany's $9,000,000 trade debt to Yugoslavia.

(Diplomatic circles in Rome expressed belief Schacht's visit to Belgrade is part of Germany's campaign to win Yugoslavia away from the Little Entente.)

Dr. Nieuwland, Chemist-Priest, Dies in Capital

Heart Attack Is Fatal to Discoverer of Deadliest Known Gas.

The Rev. Julius Nieuwland, 58, who discovered the most deadly gas known, and found a way to make synthetic rubber and was awarded the highest medal a chemist can receive for his laboratory research, collapsed and died here yesterday as he talked with a friend in chemistry hall at Catholic University.

He was chatting with Dr. Henry P. Ward, associate professor of chemistry at Catholic University, when he was stricken with a heart attack.

It was planned yesterday that his body be shipped to South Bend, Ind., where he was a professor of chemistry at Notre Dame and where, with test tubes and formulas, he carved a name for himself in the annals of scientific research.

Born in Belgium.

Father Nieuwland was born in Hansbeke, Belgium, in 1878. But his ideas remained always young. On the night he was to be awarded the William H. Nichols medal as a soldier of science" before 5,000 chemists in New York in 1935, he bounced a ball on the floor of his apartment bathroom for 15 minutes and explained to reporters he wasn't playing. He told them the ball was made of synthetic rubber. He discovered a process of making rubber from chemicals.

But it was for the priest's work with dangerous chemicals, his constant fight with death in the laboratory, that made him famous.

Discovered Lewisite.

One day in 1934 announcement was made that the most deadly gas known—"the dew of death"—had been discovered in the quiet laboratory of Catholic University in Washington. Then came another announcement that it was a scholarly Catholic priest who had made the experiments which actually led up to the discovery. The gas is called "Lewisite."

On his shoes the Rev. Nieuwland wore rubber heels he made himself, of synthetic rubber. "And they last a long time, too," he would tell his friends and associates.

His research opened a new field to industry. Even now scientists hope some day soon to perfect a method by which rubber can be manufactured for commercial purposes from coal and oil.

Father Nieuwland came to America with his parents in youth and took up residence at South Bend, Ind., where he attended Notre Dame and was awarded an A. B. degree in 1899.

For his Ph.D., he came to Washington and attended Holy Cross College. He was awarded this degree in 1904.

Thereafter, for many years, he came to this city to spend his vacation. He had just arrived for his annual trip yesterday when he died.

He joined the teaching staff of Notre Dame University in 1904 and stayed there until his death. He was known both as an organic and a biological chemist.

Effort Spurred To Avert War Among Chinese

Canton, Nanking Leaders Hurl Charges; British Ships Stand By.

Copyright, 1936, by United Press.

Canton, South China (Friday), June 12.—A frantic last-minute effort was under way today to avert war between the South China provinces, led by Kwangtung and Kwangsi leaders, and the Central China regime in Nanking, headed by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

Nanking flatly charged the Cantonese with conspiring with Japan to force a new civil war which would bleed China and make her an easy prey to Japanese imperialism." Cantonese leaders, sneering at the Nanking allegations, said the prime reason for the northward march of their armies was to force the "cowardly Central China regime" to join the South in a drive to expel Japanese forces from the North China provinces.

Most of the efforts at conciliation were coming from Nanking, where ten Cantonese members of the central executive committee of the Nationalist (Kuomintang) Party telegraphed Chen Chi-Tang, head of the Canton forces, charging Japanese provocative agents had induced the war lords of the South China provinces to rise against Nanking because of their desire to oust Chiang Kai-Shek, who has been charged with a program designed to establish himself as dictator of all China.

Urges Chen to Act.

The C. E. C. committeemen urged Chen to use his good offices to stop the northward advance of more than 200,000 South China troops, which, for a week, have been advancing in the direction of Hankow, occupation of which would render the position of the Nanking armies untenable.

Meanwhile, the southern leaders here were reported to have rejected an invitation to attend a session in Nanking on July 10 of the C. E. C., which nominally represents all Nationalist Party factions in the country.

A huge student demonstration to support the northern march was planned for tomorrow, but student leaders were reported loath to order out their members because of rumors of a split within the southern military ranks, between the provincial factions of Kwantung and Kwangsi.

New charges were made that Pai Chung-hsi, the Kwangsi war lord, hoped to steal the whole southern movement as soon as the Yangtse Valley regions are occupied and make himself the supreme military figure in China.

Military Supplies.

It also was reported that Japanese agents were selling military supplies to Kwangsi and furnishing Pai Chung-hsi with military advisers who were replacing other foreign advisers formerly in his employ.

The British gunboats Cicada and Tarantula were standing off the Canton bund, in the Pearl River, to protect British interests.

Most Liberal Platform Adopted Since 'T. R.'s' Reign Represents Party Compromise

Eleventh-Hour Landon Views Among Planks

to-be—Gov. Alf M. Landon; the liberal Senator William E. Borah, and a powerful group of Eastern Old Guardsmen on the committee.

Tonight Borah was on train bound back to Washington when he got word at Akron of Gov. Landon's message to the convention. He appeared "incredible or stunned" at the news, the Cleveland Plain Dealer reported, then commented:

"Well, that's his business. Why didn't he do it sooner?"

He declined further comment until morning.

A Compromise Platform.

Landon's lieutenants had wired him Wednesday night that the resolutions sub-committee had emasculated his stand on these three planks and several others. The Landon forces moved immediately into action, and the result was a temporary halt in work on the platform pending a night of negotiations.

This morning the resolutions committee resumed its deliberations, and although it kept at it from 9 in the morning until 8 tonight, and yielded to Landon on some issues, when the report was read to the full committee assembled by Chairman Herman M. Langworthy, it fell shy on eight points of the platform originally brought to Cleveland from Topeka.

It was a compromise platform, but one that Gov. Landon felt he could accept with the three stipulated qualifications. It was a platform sufficiently moderate to appease the phalanx of Eastern Old Liners on the resolutions committee, and yet liberal enough to permit Senator Borah to entrain for Washington generally appeased.

Borah Forced to Yield.

Borah himself had been forced to yield in some measure on three planks dear to his heart—monopoly, foreign relations and money.

The convention's monopoly plank, strongest any political party ever has adopted, failed to take the stand against second-degree holding companies Borah had asked.

The sound-money plank came out flatly against "further devaluation of the dollar." Borah had opposed this. And the Idahoan had fought a futile battle of words with the resolutions committee in an effort to declare the World Court the "creature" of the League of Nations.

In other respects, the convention accepted the foreign relations plank written by Borah. The result was an isolationist platform that declared vigorously against American entry into either the League of Nations or the World Court, and yet pledged co-operation with other nations for stabilization of currencies and in arbitrative efforts.

Throughout the platform rang the doctrine of States' rights and free enterprise. The party now stands for relief administration by the States, social security legislation by the States, and State wages and hours regulation for women and children.

Brevity Objective.

The document, as adopted tonight by the convention, contains approximately 4,000 words—about one-third the length of the 1932 Republican platform. Brevity has been a primary objective of the platform draftsmen ever since the resolutions committee was organized Tuesday. They want to carry to the country a challenge so concisely stated that it can be easily read by the masses of the people, on whom they will depend in November.

Short sentences whipped a staccato beat through the platform—leading off with the words:

That sentence is the keynote of both the platform and the convention.

To the resounding acclaim of the convention, the platform championed the cause of constitutional government and the Supreme Court, with which the New Deal has been intermittently at war. Opposing arbitrary encroachment by the legislative and executive branches of government, the platform takes the position that "there can be no individual liberty without an independent judiciary," and pledges:

"To preserve the American system of free enterprise, private competition and equality of opportunity, and to seek its constant betterment in the interests of all."

Planks in Epitome.

Briefly stated, the platform takes the following position on major national issues:

Farm—Espousal of a policy of abundance, rather than scarcity, with "such a balance between soil-building and soil-depleting crops as will permanently insure productivity, with reasonable benefits to co-operating farmers on family-type farms." A national land-use program, experimental aid to new-crop farming, ample farm credit and tariff protection to farmers, are provided.

Regulation—Federal regulation of the interstate activities of public utilities and of the marketing of securities to protect investors. Setting up an independent tribunal to preside "where governmental regulation is desirable and salutary."

Relief—Return of responsibility for relief administration to non-political local agencies. State administration of relief "while the need exists," with the Federal and local governments sharing the burden. Federal public works on their merits, separate from the administration of relief.

Re-employment—Encouragement of employment by promoting individual enterprise and removing restrictions on production.

Social security—Supplementary payments to every citizen over 65, financed on a "pay-as-you-go" basis by each generation from the proceeds of a direct tax widely distributed, with State and Federal governments sharing in the cost.

Money and banking—"A sound currency to be preserved at all hazards." Restoration to Congress of the power to coin money and regulate its value, repealing the President's authority. Opposition to further dollar devaluation. Co-operation with other nations toward currency stabilization, with due regard to "national interests."

Balance the Budget.

Government finance—Balancing the budget, "not by increasing taxes, but by cutting expenditures, drastically and immediately." Co-ordination of the tax system with State and local systems. Taxing power to be used only for revenue and "not for political and punitive purposes."

Monopoly—Vigorous enforcement of both criminal and civil laws against monopolies and trusts and their officials, together with such additional legislation "as is necessary to make it impossible for private monopoly to exist in the United States." Denunciation of monopoly as "indefensible and intolerable" and destructive to Government and liberty.

Civil service—A pledge for restoration and extension of the merit system "virtually destroyed by New Deal spoilsmen," to make Government service an attractive field for a permanent career. Opposition to discrimination against women and children in civil service, tantamount to a demand for repeal of section 213 of the economy act, aimed at married Government workers.

Labor Stand Outlined.

Labor—Protection of collective bargaining rights from interference. State laws and interstate compacts "to abolish sweatshops and child labor, and to protect women and children with respect to maximum hours, minimum wages and working conditions.

Tariff—Repeal of the reciprocal trade agreement law, and denunciation of secret negotiations of reciprocal trade treaties. Restoration of the principle of the flexible tariff; protection from imported commodities that commercially compete with American goods; adjustment of tariffs to serve trade promotion, currency stabilization, and a balance between agriculture and industry.

Foreign affairs—Declaration against American entry into the World Court or the League of Nations, and a pledge to maintain peace by all honorable means without leading to foreign alliances or political commitments.

National defense—Maintenance of "adequate" Army, Navy and air forces; international co-operation for arms limitation and control of the arms traffic.

Other Planks Described.

Other planks called for "equal opportunity" for colored citizens, adequate compensation for disabled veterans and their widows, orphans and dependents; collection of the $12,000,000,000 war debt, and aid to the Indian population.

Gov. Landon's telegram to the convention last night, enunciating his own position on money, labor and civil service, was the echo of days of unsuccessful efforts by the Landon forces to persuade the resolutions committee to accept his views literally on these points.

Landon made no mention of five other planks on which he had suffered setbacks in the committee. He had espoused the so-called Vandenberg amendment giving the President a veto power over individual appropriations items. He had asked a 50 per cent reduction in expenditures and a balanced budget in 18 months. He had submitted a housing plank. And he favored only the modification of the reciprocal trade law, to provide for bilateral agreements, without the favored nations clause.

After a bitter fight, the resolutions committee turned thumbs down on each of these proposals.

Concessions to Landon.

While preserving most of his major objectives, little of the Kansan's suggested phraseology was included in the farm plank.

Beforehand, however, the resolutions committee had made substantial last-minute concessions to Landon on a number of his major planks, after elminating them entirely in the Wednesday night draft.

The proposal for Federal regulation of interstate utilities was included at the specific request of Landon. The statement against dollar devaluaion was added to the money plank at his request, and the social security plank was revised at the eleventh hour largely to suit Landon.

It was disclosed last night that former President Hoover had communicated to the committee his desire for a gold standard plank. The original Landon plank had mentioned "gold" three times. Yet all reference to gold was scrupulously deleted by the committee.

One of Borah's Successes.

This was one of Borah's major platform successes. The Idahoan, who by his implied threat to bolt the party had forced the committee to accept largely his views on foreign relations, monopoly and money, left Cleveland fairly well-satisfied with his achievements.

Former Senator John Thomas, of Idaho, a friend of the committee, brought word to the committee that the Republican independent thought the group had done a good job. This statement by Thomas was instrumental in dissuading the committee from eliminating the World Court from its "foreign entanglements" plank.

But Borah's expression of moderate satisfactoin came before he had learned of Landon's telegraphed convention message, qualifying the convention platform. This strategy by the Kansan out-maneuvered the Idaho "Lion" and largely nullified what he had accomplished on the money and labor planks.

3 G.O.P. Candidates Won on 1st Ballot

Cleveland, June 11 (AP).—A check of records showed today that past Republican national conventions have nominated three candidates for the Presidency with unanimous, first-ballot votes.

Gen. Ulysses S. Grant received the nomination by acclamation at the conventions in 1868 and 1872 at Chicago and Philadelphia.

McKinley received every vote on the first roll call at Philadelphia in 1900, and Theodore Roosevelt, his running mate, received all but one, which was not cast.

Landon's Home Tie Appeal to Peggy

And this is what she said:

"His ability to take time out and do things with his family. I think so many men come home tired, and devote little of their attention to their families. But he always does. If I want him to go riding with me, he goes—or anything else I want to do."

Landon Says He Aided New Dealers at Outset

Cleveland, June 11 (AP).—A frequent observation by Gov. Alf M. Landon during the pre-convention campaign was that he had co-operated fully with the New Deal at its outset.

"It had the whole country pulling for it," he related on one occasion. "For example, in the State of Kansas, as Governor I co-operated with it in every way possible. I felt that the Nation's interests came ahead of any partisan interest."

Ex-D. C. Minister Is Shot by Robber

The Rev. Paris B. Stauffer, retired clergyman, who was formerly attached to St. Alban's Church, lay critically wounded last night at West Chester, Pa., from a rifle shot wound, fired at him Wednesday night by a young thief with Rev. Stauffer's own gun, the Associated Press reported.

The shot was fired as the retired clergyman, who is 69 years old, approached his cabin at Dorlans, near West Chester. In the doorway stood the young man with the gun.

"This is a holdup," he warned.

Rev. Stauffer, thinking it a joke, advanced. A shot was fired from the small rifle at close range. Later the minister said he had seen the man in the neighborhood before.

The injured clergyman, a bullet in his abdomen, walked a quarter of a mile for assistance.

Rev. Stauffer, who retired from the ministry in 1921, because of ill health, has lived alone since that time. Before serving at St. Alban's Church in 1912-13, he was stationed at Christ Church in Kensington, Md.

For a time he lived with, his daughter, Margaret Stauffer, at Arlington, Md. He has another daughter living in Kennedysville, Md.

Landon's Applause Exceeds Hoover's

Cleveland, June 11 (AP).—Although Herbert Hoover's ovation sent the Republican National Convention's applause indicator to the top, technically there was a higher recording tonight when John Hamilton shouted the name—"Landon."

The illuminated sound thermometer which faces the audience vibrated at 100 during both demonstrations, but the milliampere chart—a more accurate device—revealed the difference.

In milliamperes:

Hoover, 4.

Hamilton, 4.3.

Hoover, 75.

Hamilton, 85.

Landon Pledges Vigorous Fight

Newsreelmen, sound trucks and uniformed police could be heard outside.

Mrs. Landon said, "I'm old enough not to let myself become too tense and excited."

"I have noticed, though, that I was going around tonight picking up things more than I usually do. I think, however, that might be because the children weren't here. It is the first time they ever have been away from me."

Nancy Jo, 4, and John Cobb, 2, were taken over to the home of Mrs. S. E. Cobb, Mrs. Landon's mother, to spend the day and night because the Governor's wife did not want them awakened by the noisy celebration.

The children, she said, didn't know anything about their father being selected for the Presidential candidate.

"They didn't want to leave," Mrs. Landon said. "Nancy was having a grand time playing in the yard and watching the children and cameramen."

Nancy Jo and John, however, must have suspected something unusual was in the air, their mother said, for they stayed closely by her side during the morning.

Nancy Inquisitive.

"Nancy wanted to know why there were so many picture men. I told her they were just some more men who wanted to take some pictures of her father."

Occasionally as Mrs. Landon talked, the Governor would emerge from a room where he was having conferences, dictating and talking over the telephone.

"I think he is rather tired," she said. "This strain on top of having some dental work done—."

As to her own feeling about the matter, Mrs. Landon was reticent.

"I don't feel it is my place to 'comment,'" she said. "I'll let him do all that. I'll just do what I can to help."

One thing rather bothered her.

"You know," she said, her dark eyes sparkling, "several of my friends already have said, 'I suppose we will not be seeing so much of you now.' There's no reason why this should make any particular difference—that rather hurt.

"I had to give up some things when I moved here. I may have to give up more. However, as Emerson, in his compensation essay said, if you have certain great things, you must compensate by giving up others."

Mrs. Landon said she expected to take the children to a Colorado ranch about June 25. She will be accompanied by Mr. Landon's father and Peggy Anne, the Governor's 18-year-old daughter.

Peggy now is at Cleveland.

The Governor responded in cordial terms to congratulations from Senator Vandenburg and Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald, of Michigan. Vandenberg gave his "assurances of complete support in the battle of the century."

Representative James Wadsworth, of New York, telegraphed to Mrs. Landon:

Home Town to Celebrate.

Independence, Kans., June 11 (AP). Independence, "home town" of Gov. Alf M. Landon, plans a rousing celebration if he is nominated at the Republican convention, Mayor Ralph C. Mitchell said today.

Referring to Topeka's plans for a celebration, Mayor Mitchell sent the following message to the Kansas capital:

"Where do you get that 'home-town' stuff? If you hear a noise so loud you can't hear your own, it will be coming from Alf's home town, Independence, Kans., 143 miles south of Topeka."

Cleveland, June 11.—Gov. Harry W. Nice, of Maryland, today withdrew as a candidate for the Presidency in order that Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, might be nominated by acclamation. But the Maryland delegation immediately started a "Nice boom" for the Vice Presidential nomination.

J. Cookman Boyd, who was to have nominated the Maryland chief executive for the Presidency, tonight made a few revisions in his speech and planned to deliver it to the convention tomorrow, presenting Gov. Nice's name for the Vice Presidency.

Meanwhile tonight the Maryland delegation paraded the convention hall with a huge banner proclaiming that Gov. Nice was the only Republican Governor elected in the 1934 Democratic landslide in a normally Democratic State. Carrying the banner were red-headed Joe Schloss and Joseph Ferri in a new straw hat, both of Baltimore.

Lusty Cheer Goes Up.

When the huge Maryland flag was carried into the parade as the convention was assembling for its night session, the band struck up "Maryland, My Maryland," and a lusty cheer went up from the delegates. The Marylanders are being treated with good-natured fun by the other delegations, since none here believes Gov. Nice has a chance for the second place on the ticket.

Gov. Nice appeared before the convention tonight, climbing into the rostrum to second the nomination of Gov. Landon.

Gov. Nice said in his speech:

"The Republican convention of Maryland did me the signal honor instructing Maryland's delegation to vote for my nomination for President of the United States.

"Chaos Supreme."

"In these trying times with chaos reigning supreme in Washington, and the menacing shadow of dictatorship obscuring the rights and liberties of the people, with a reckless and wanton squandering of the taxpayers money upon constantly recurring futile experimentation, when autocracy and bureaucracy coupled with regimentation, have become night riders of calamity, Republican success, only through which sanity in Government may be restored, and protection guaranteed within and under the Constitution, becomes transcendently more important to the people of this country than the gratification of the personal ambition of any man.

While I am deeply sensible of the great honor conferred upon me by the people of Maryland, yet I am convinced that it becomes my bounden duty, performed with the greatest degree of pleasure, to release Maryland's delegation, and I am carrying out its mandate and my wish by seconding, and I trust that the wisdom of this convention may decree by acclamation, the nomination of the next President of the United States, Gov. Landon."

Ellwood E. Werner, 52, of 1635 Webster street northwest, died Wednesday night at Providence Hospital after a short illness. He was chief clerk of the public works department at the Navy Yard.

A native of Washington, Mr. Werner had worked at the Navy Yard in various capacities for more than 30 years. He was a member of the Knights of Columbus and of the Holy Name Society of Sacred Heart Parish.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth S. Werner; a son, John E. Werner, and four daughters, Mrs. William P. Bardwell, Miss Katherine Werner, Miss Courtney Werner and Miss Anne Werner, and a sister, Mrs. N. W. Dumont. ## Bethesda Man Hurt Helping Motorist

Charles Russell Stephens, 24, of Bethesda, Md., was injured seriously last night while acting as a good Samaritan to a motorist whose car was overturned in front of his home in River road near Winston drive, Bethesda, Md.

Leonard Owens, of Glen Echo Heights, Md., the motorist, told Montgomery County police he had run into the ditch to avoid a car which came over the brow of a hill on the wrong side of the road. Stephens and his two brothers, Elwood and Jesse Stephens, went out to the wreck and aided in righting Owens' car.

Storm Here Brings Drop of 18 Degrees

Summer's heat skipped out of Washington in about 20 minutes yesterday.

Blasts of wind from angry thunderclouds blew down temperature readings at the rate of nearly a degre a minute. In the 20 minutes, immediately following the storm's breaking at 5:20 p. m., the Weather Bureau's thermometer fell 18 degrees.

The bureau said the phenomenon was "rather unusual" and perhaps a record in cooling speeds for the year. The storm, it was explained, changed the general air movement from the south, where it was warm, to the north, where it was cooler.

A woman was overcome by the sizzling temperatures earlier in the day. She was treated at Casualty Hospital.

She was Mrs. Lottie Henderson, of 612 Fifteenth street northeast, who collapsed while she was at work in the National Pants Co. factory in the 400 block of First street.

Lowden Is Pleased At Landon Choice

Oregon, Ill., June 11 (AP).—Former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, elderly statesman of the Republican Party and veteran campaigner for farm relief, expressed gratification today at the forthcoming choice of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas as his party's Presidential nominee.

"Of course, I'll support him," said Lowden, whose name was mentioned in some preconvention speculation as a possible spearhead for the now flattened out "Stop Landon" movement. Lowden did not give any encouragement to the Landon foes.

"I intend to send Gov. Landon a congratulatory message today," Lowden added.

He declined to comment on the proposed agricultural plank for the platform. With only excerpts from the proposal available, he said:

'3 Long Years' Phrase In Platform Preamble

Convention Hall, Cleveland, June 11 (AP).—The Republican platform picked up Senator Steiwer's phrase, "Three long years," which he snapped out so often in his attack on the New Deal in the keynote speech.

While the band in the convention hall played the tune of "Three Blind Mice," and the crowd there disclosed that the platform preamble said in part:

"For three long years the New Deal has dishonored American traditions . . ."

Hiram Bingham, vice chairman of the platform committee, got a cheer and a laugh when he read the phrase.

intoned "Three long years," it was

Venezuela Jails Leaders in Strike

Caracas, Venezuela, June 1 (AP).—The new Venezuelan government, moving swiftly against a general strike inaugurated today by workers, threw the strike committee at Maracaibo into jail and there was shooting on streets here.

Wholesale arrests were made in the capital here and at Maracaibo, where workers in the huge oil industry participated in the walkout.

The strike was called to protest against a law before Congress for suppression of Extremists. Labor unions contend it is dictatorial and unconstitutional.

The situation in Maracaibo was described as "ugly" after the strike committee was arrested.

In fighting in a remote section of the capital an undetermined number of persons was wounded. A government spokesman said only a few were hurt.

Badoglio Assigned To Revamp Army

Rome, June 11 (AP).—Marshal Pietro Badoglio, 63-year-old grizzled veteran of the World War and "conqueror of Ethiopia," was intrusted with another big task today—that of reorganizing all of Italy's defense forces.

Premier Benito Mussolini returned Badoglio to his former duties as chief of the Italian general staff, Badoglio resigning as viceroy of Ethiopia.

Military sources said Badoglio would reorganize all military forces, including the army, the navy and the air force.

Marshal Rudolfo Graziani, "wolf of the south," was named viceroy of Ethiopia, succeeding Badoglio, and will continue in control there. He commanded Italy's southern army in the war against Ethiopia.

Fascists applauded the decision to keep Badoglio, their "hero of the African campaign," at home. Although easing of the tension between Italy and Great Britain has been felt, most Blackshirts considered Il Duce's move an alert one.

Kerr to Address Parley On Weights-Measures

An address on Federal meat inspection by Dr. R. H. Kerr, of the Department of Agriculture, will feature the closing session today of the National Conference on Weights and Measures.

Morning and afternoon sessions today will be held at the Washington Hotel. The first three days' discussions were at the Bureau of Standards. Other speakers at the final gathering will be P. L. Holland, chief engineer of the Maryland Public Service Commission, and F. S. Holbrook, of the Bureau of Standards.

New G. O. P. Fighting Spirit

The New Year's Eve type of hysteria in the huge hall was really brief and spotty. What these people feel for Landon is not a shouting, frenzied enthusiasm. It's a quiet, comfortable conviction that he's a sane and sensible Middle West American.

That's what the speakers tried to say for hours on the platform. These Republicans stated their weariness with crusades and brilliant banners and noble sentiments. They said so, and every time they said so the sea of faces downstairs thundered their approval.

But the galleries stayed quiet all night until the very last. The only times they applauded were when the movie cameramen turned their lenses on them and waved them to shout. Then they "acted."

Shout for Borah.

And after the defeated candidates had trodden the projecting pier to step aside in public for Landon, the galleries began shouting, "Where's Borah?" Again and again the galleries demanded this lone irreconcilable, this weary old gladiator. Again they shouted, "We want Borah."

But the Senator from Idaho, his leonine 71-year-old face deeply creased with his defeat, was on a train speeding away from Cleveland, even as Alfred E. Smith left Chicago on a train with the window shades of his compartment pulled down tight ni June, 1932.

When Wisconsin and West Virginia voted 19 votes for Borah against Landon's 984, however, the galleries and the floor joined to boo any move not to have the nomination unanimous.

In the long hectic evening the high spot was unquestionably the telegram that Alf Landon sent to the convention.

Started Demonstration.

This was the first showmanlike thing Candidate Landon has done, in the honest opinion of the press. His simple statement that went far to strengthen the platform immediately sparked the tinder of enthusiasm into the biggest demonstration this convention has seen.

When Hamilton finished reading the telegram, with which he prefaced his nominating speech, the house went collectively crazy.

G. O. P. Planks Progressive, Hoover Avers

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 11.—Former President Herbert Hoover gave an unqualified indorsement to the Republican Party platform tonight after Gov. Landon had made a personal declaration for the gold standard currency position, which Hoover failed to have included in the convention statement.

The statement unauthorized by Hoover called the platform "the fighting, definite and progressive statement the country needs" and said it "admirably covers the principles and methods I have repeatedly advocated."

As first dictated by Paul Sexson, a secretary, the statement added "there are one or two items that I should like to have seen extended. The extension of these items is inevitable in any event."

A few minutes later Sexson requested that these two sentences be eliminated and that there be added in their place this one: "Gov. Landon's statement amply covers any other points that may be in question."

Earlier today Hoover sent a telegram to the convention at Cleveland strongly urging a platform plank favoring ultimate return to the gold standard. His plea was rejected by the committee which stuck to its declaration for a "sound currency."

Hoover's complete statement follows:

"The platform admirably covers the principles and methods I have so repeatedly advocated. The platform is the fighting, definite and progressive statement the country needs.

"When put into force by the American people, these principles will regenerate the country.

"Gov. Landon's statement amply covers any other points that may be in question."

Lang Twins to Visit Passion Play Scer

Anne Marie Monika and Elizabeth Matilda, the Washington-born twins of Dr. and Mrs. Anton J. Lang, jr., of 3803 S street northwest, are soon to take their first ocean voyage and to have their first sight of Oberammergau, the home town of their parents and also of the famous Passion Play.

The little girls were 1 year old May 31, and Dr. Lang, who is a son of the most famous of the portrayers of the Christus in the Passion Play, thinks it time for them to meet their relatives, who comprise a major portion of Oberammergau's population.

With the twins, Dr. and Mrs. Lang will leave Washington Friday, sailing Saturday from New York on the Bremen. Dr. Lang had to postpone the trip until after the completion of the academic year at Georgetown University, where he has been professor of German for several years.

Mrs. Lang was formerly Miss Klara Mayr, and took the role of Mary Magdalene in the Passion Play before her marriage to her childhood friend. The Mayrs and the Langs, grandparents of the twins, are the heads of two numerous clans in Oberammergau.

Dr. and Mrs. Lang will return in September before the opening of the fall term at Georgetown.

Wives Are Feted By Kiwanis Club

Local Kiwanians were hosts to their wives and several visiting members of Kiwanis Clubs at a pre-convention ladies' day meeting yesterday. More than 200 persons were present at the meeting, held at the Mayflower Hotel.

Arrangements for the entertainment of the visiting Kiwanis delegates to the International Kiwanis convention were outlined by Lewis T. Breuninger, general chairman of the convention. Mrs. Harold N. Nash, chairman of the ladies' committees, has planned functions for the wives of the visiting delegates.

Frederick Parker, secretary of the Kiwanis International and a member of the Kiwanis Club of Chicago, said convention registration is double that of any other in the last four years. This convention should be the largest ever held by the Kiwanis Club, he stated.

Two men were held for the action of the grand jury yesterday by a coroner's jury after an inquest into the brutal slaying of Mrs Mary Maier, alias Mary Conrad, 3 of 628 Independence avenue southwest.

The men, who were charged with murder, are Alonzo Turner, 29, of 933 Ninth street northwest, and Elmer Fulk, 29, a roomer at the Maier home. They were taken to the District Jail.

They were arrested and charged with the slaying after Mrs. Maier was found unconscious in a shed in the rear of the house next to her home Saturday night. Before her death in Casualty Hospital Monday, the woman identified both men as those who beat and criminally attacked her.

But ever since last December AMERICA SPEAKS, through Nation-wide polls conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion, has forecast the nomination of the Kansas Governor.

Here's the Record:

April 5: Landon up to 56 per cent.

May 31: Final check on eve of the convention shows Landon favored by 55.4 per cent of Republican voters.

Many Other Events Confirm Accuracy of Institute Polls

IN every instance in which the public has had an opportunity to vote officially on an issue or a candidate, and in which a comparison is possible, polls of the American Institute of Public Opinion have shown the trend correctly. Here's proof:

November: A Democrat was elected Governor of Kentucky with 55 per cent of the major party vote.

Institute polls at the time assessed the strength in Kentucky of the Nation's No. 1 Democrat, Roosevelt, at 57 per cent.

November: The strength of the Democratic Party in New York State in November was indicated in a poll in which Roosevelt received 51 per cent of the major party vote.

That same month Democratic candidates for Assemblyman in New York State polled 55 per cent.

January: A poll reported on January 12 showed the country overwhelmingly in favor of Government old age pensions, but against the $200 a month advocated by Dr. Francis Townsend and his followers. Only 3.8 per cent of poll voters favored paying this sum.

Subsequent developments, including the California primary, where a Townsend advocate was snowed under, have shown that the Townsend Plan has less political support than was previously supposed.

January: Gov. Talmadge of Georgia threatened to lead a revolt among Southern Democrats against Roosevelt.

Polls of the Institute at the time showed Roosevelt's strength in Georgia at 83 per cent, and it has since risen to 86 per cent. Nothing more has been heard of Talmadge's strength with Southern Democrats.

February: Institute polls showed that Alfred E. Smith's famed "take-a-walk" speech in January changed few votes.

This has since been generally conceded by political observers in both parties.

March: A definite upswing in President Roosevelt's popularity was shown to be developing in the late winter and early spring. His majority rose from 52.6 per cent in January to 54.1 per cent in March, continued up to the present month.

This upswing was confirmed by the heavy Democratic vote in primaries in California, Illinois, Wisconsin and Ohio, and in Democratic registration figures elsewhere.

April: An Institute poll in New Jersey showed Landon running ahead of Borah by 3½ to 1 in April.

In the primary, May 19, Landon defeated Borah 4 to 1.

April: A poll in April showed New England was the only section of the country in which Hoover was running second to Landon among G. O. P. voters, with Borah third.

Republican primary in Massachusetts, biggest New England State, placed leading candidates in the same order: Landon first, Hoover second, Borah third.

May: On May 3 AMERICA SPEAKS reported that Landon's popularity with Republicans in California had dropped sharply from 64 per cent to 46 per cent in four weeks.

In the May 5 primary California Republicans turned down a slate of delegates pledged to Landon, elected an uninstructed delegation.

3 Texas Cities Hear Speeches By Roosevelt

Executive Gives Talks at Houston, Austin and San Antonio.

As President Roosevelt's special train sped through Texas, the Chief Executive made three speeches. These were at Houston, San Antonio and Austin.

In his address at Austin, the Chief Executive said, in part:

"Vice President Garner is my helpmate.

"Not only I, but the whole Nation, owes a special debt to him.

"It is a great regret that I cannot make a longer stop in Austin, in order to receive the hospitality of the citizens as well as of your Governor in the capital of this State.

"As San Jacinto and the Alamo represent to me the struggle for independence and the earlier days of the republic, so this capital city represents the later days of the republic and these long years of statehood since Texas became the twenty-eighth State and star in the national flag.

Notes Their Zest for Life.

"Texas has always had men who have a zest for life, for peace, for progress—men who have won honors at home and abroad.

"The fine tradition continues. You know, I am sure, that I lean heavily on the men and women from the Lone Star State who are rendering such fine service to the Government of the United States.

"To one of them not only I but the entire Nation owes a special debt—one who began his long and distinguished career as a member of your Legislature here in Austin—one whom I proudly and affectionately call my helpmate—the Vice President of the United States."

Speaks at San Antonio.

Earlier in the evening President Roosevelt spoke to the eager crowds in San Antonio, repeating the famous message of the Texas pioneer Travis, "I shall never surrender," and expressed the hope that the pioneers of Texas "know that we have not disregarded or lost the virility and the ideals they fought for.

"I hope they know that the overwhelming majority of Americans in 1936 are once more meeting new problems with courage—that we, too, are ready and willing to stand up and fight for truth against falsehood, for freedom of the individual against license by the few," he declared.

In this address the President referred to efforts of the New Deal to win economic security for the millions of the American working masses.

"I cannot help but feel," he told his audience, "that the brave men who died here saw on the distant horizon some forecast of the century beyond.

"I hope they know that we have not discarded or lost the virility and the ideals of the pioneer. I hope they know that the overwhelming majority of Americans of 1936 are once more meeting new problems with new courage—that we, too, are ready and willing to stand up and fight for the truth against falsehood, for freedom of the individual against license for the few."

Houston Hears Him.

Halting at Houston yesterday morning, the President paid tribute to the heroes who won for Texas her liberty from the yoke of Mexico.

"The Nation desires no further geographical expansion. The establishment of Texas, made possible at this spot by Sam Houston's men, seems to have been justified by the natural colonization of later years but these heroes gave us more than territory—they set an example which is, in itself, a glorious heritage, a just cause for State and national commemoration."

Referring back to the New Deal and the forthcoming political campaign, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"Men fought here for the principles they loved more dearly than their own lives. Liberty-loving people will always do battle for the principle they believe to be right. Civilization, alas, has not yet made it unnecessary for men to die in battle to sustain the principle. It is, however, my hope that in this generation, the United States, by its own example, can maintain and help maintain the principles by peace rather than by means of war.

"The pioneers and the liberators of Texas, looking down on us today, would, I am certain, say amen to that."

Roosevelt Hails Texans' Fight For Liberties

Can Still Carry On War for Humanity, Declares President.

ond of his major addresses on the 4,000-mile tour he is making in the West, a brief stop was planned late tonight at Austin, the State capital, for a rear-platform speech.

Few stops were made by the Presidential special, but crowds gathered along the way. At Eagle Lake several hundred persons appealed to the President's aids for a personal appearance, but the Executive remained in the cool of his private car and waved greetings to the crowd.

At San Jacinto Roosevelt met Andrew Jackson Houston, only surviving son of Gen. Houston.

"I am proud to know that my father knew your father," the President said, recalling that when a boy the elder Roosevelt used to be sent to Washington by his law office to carry papers to Gen. Houston, then a Texas Senator.

Gov. James V. Allred who, with Senator Sheppard, boarded the President's special in Texas early this morning, formally welcomed the President to the battlefield.

"It is so wonderfully appropriate" the Governor said, "that during this our birthday year, another great governmental leader, one who has faced and overcome a modern national ordeal fully as fraught with disaster as the one a hundred years ago must have seemed to leaders, should come with us to pay tribute to their immortality."

The trip was the first to Texas for the President since 1928 when he boosted Alfred E. Smith at the Democratic National Convention.

Mrs. Roosevelt attracted fully as much attention as did the President. Hundreds of persons called to her as she sat in the car between the President and Gov. Allred. The First Lady smiled and waved at the admirers.

'Windfall' Tax Accord Neared By Conferees

Consideration of Corporate Levy Portion of Bill Is Delayed.

Centering their efforts on the windfall or "unjust enrichment" provisions of the tax bill, House and Senate tax conferees yesterday reported an agreement was near on that section, but the heart of the bill, the controversial graduated corporate profits tax, has not been considered.

"We are making progress on the enrichment tax," said Senator Daniel O. Hastings (Republican), Delaware, "but we haven't started yet on the tariff or profits sections."

There was never much disagreement on the windfall tax. As the provision passed the House, approximately $100,000,000 would have been collected from processors who passed the AAA processing taxes on to the consumers. The Senate provision made a number of exceptions, and it was estimated the revenue-producing powers had been reduced about $20,000,000.

President Roosevelt in his tax message suggested levying a windfall tax, since the Supreme Court's suspension of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration had the effect of returning to processors large sums which it was asserted they had been able to pass on to the consumers. Both the Senate and House provide that if the processor paid the tax himself, he will not be required to pay a windfall tax.

They maintained their strict silence rule, and little could be learned of what really took place.

"There is not a thing," said Senator King (Democrat), Utah, the Senate chairman, "I am deaf, dumb, and blind."

Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, said the conferees were "climbing the hill a little. We are agreed on a few little inconsequential things," he declared, but he declined to enlarge upon them.

It seemed certain, however, that no substantial agreement would be reached until late in the week when the Republican members of the committee return from the Cleveland convention.

Church Cornerstone Gone After Service

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Crisfield, Md., June 11.—When the colored congregation came out of Ebenezer M. E. Church at Marumsco, near here, following a service held last night its members were surprised to find the cornerstone of the church missing.

A searching party some hours later found pieces of the cornerstone and a small Bible in the woods more than a mile from the church.

The only known motive for stealing the cornerstone was that robbers thought possibly money or other valuables were put in the stone when it was placed and cemented in the outside column of the church structure several years ago.

Honor Awards Are Presented Six Girl Scouts

Golden Eaglet Pins Are Given as Character Citations.

Six Girl Scouts yesterday afternoon received golden Eaglet pins, highest awards that can be given to Scouts, in a brief informal ceremony at Pierce Hall while parents and members of their troops looked on.

Those who received the coveted pins, awards for character, were Martha Louise Hamilton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Hamilton, 1303 North Edgewood drive, Clarendon, Va.; Florence Farwell, daughter of Mrs. Bertha E. Farwell, 1603 K street northwest; June Thomas, daughter of Mrs. N. H. Pool, 1840 Biltmore street; Elizabeth Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace H. Smith, 3435 Quebec street; Carmen Billington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Billington, Lyon Village, Va., and Janet Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Brown, of Silver Spring, Md.

Each pin was awarded on the recommendation of the girl's troop leader to the local council which, in turn, recommended the candidate to the national committee on badges and awards. The national committee, after going over credentials, then wrote the Scout a personal letter and upon her reply depended largely her chances for becoming a Gold Eaglet.

La Pennington To Head Revue At the Grove

Other Former Ziegfeld Stars on Bill; Boat Trips Popular.

By Chanticleer.

Just when it looked as though we had hit a moderate summer stride in the dine-and-dance category, along comes the new Cocoanut Grove and blows the lid off the whole after-dark situation.

Meaning that Tuesday night the grove presents a whale of a revue, headed by the perennial favorite Ann Pennington. The same Ann Pennington who danced for Ziegfeld; the same Ann, with the dimpled knees, the original "girl with the million-dollar legs."

In support are Bill Brady, of last year's "Scandals"; Easter and Hazleton, dancing stars also for Ziegfeld for two seasons; the rhythm team of Alma and Roland—and 12 gorgeous girls. I haven't seen 'em, but they do say they are gorgeous in the same way Ziegfeld called 'em gorgeous.

Bill Brady has gone places in the two years since he took off in the show business right here at the Fox in a Washington revue. He comes from engagements at the Paradise, House of Morgan and Versailles in Manhattan.

• • • •

Everyone seems pleased about that new wood dance floor at the Russian Roof. And with its size. The customers are all agreed it's the best ever for No. 1 Thomas Circle—and that covers a lot of ground. Matt Windsor's Swincopators put on a bit of a genuine swing number to end each dance group these evenings.

Mia Miles Quartet still heads the festivities this week at the Lotus, with the Miller Sisters, Margie Green, Ross and Karry and others taking prominent chunks of applause back to their hotels each evening.

• • • •

Chapel Point Trips On Now.

Those trips to Chapel Point are now under way by ye goode olde steamer Potomac—each Wednesday, leaving at 9 a. m. and returning at 7:30 p. m. And, of course, that nightly moonlight trip with dancing to Bernie Jarboe and his Night Hawks.

Missed Johnny Slaughter? Well, the old maestro and his big band are summering in the mountains just outside of Hagerstown, at the Always Garden. Charley Mayer is up there doing the emmceeing and the vocalizing, sharing honors with Judy Ellington, late of the Lotus. At the piano—none other than Jimmy Santmyer and—you guessed it—Col. Joe Wubbold is presiding at the drums.

• • • •

Hammers and saws provide the rhythm at Maryland Club Gardens these days, but it will all be over in a day or two. The customers outgrew the facilities and they're merely doubling the dance floor space, moving it from one end of the portico to the other, and a few little things like that. When they are through everyone will be able to see Jimmy Harris and the band.

New celebrities dropping in at the Hi-Hat now are greeted by Kitty Simons and a new parady on "Welcome Stranger." Just can't keep up with that Hi-Hat gang. They saluted a German explorer and his party the other night with a group of German songs—in German! Those Hawaiians are different!

• • • •

Country Air-Cooled Spot.

Griffith Farms is patronized these evenings by many Washingtonians who like natural air-cooling with their victuals. Griffith Farms, as you know, is out the Marlboro pike—where the lawns offer an evening breeze while one eats.

Sammy Marks is presenting a problem to Moe Baer and the men in his band. The Hamilton's Rainbow Room Bandstand is relatively small and there's just about toe room for the group. Now Sammy is putting on weight, almost by the day!

• • • •

When you go to the Powhatan Roof (and who doesn't?) I'll bet you know Ramon, Pete Macias, Marty Rubin and others of the Powhatan family clear across the roof and with their backs to you. But do you know Arthur Harnett? No sir, and yet he's the big boss behind the whole Powhatan success. He slithers about very inauspiciously and modestly. One of these nights some one will call on him to take a public bow.

Its been a long time since La Paree has carried its floor show policy past the first of June. But so it is this year. Parker Brothers and Lynn do feats of great strength for your amusement this week, with Curtis and DuBois in bolero dances. Joan Jordan will tap her way right into your sense of rhythm. Maestro Daugherty and his boys for your dancing.

• • • •

At last we have authentic word that Milt Barrett's garden is bearing fruit (or should we say, vegetables?) Host Barrett has maintained since last winter that he would grow vegetables for his guests right on the Dude Ranch's own property. He says now he's got 'em. Dancing by the Carolinians; vegetables by Barrett.

Navy Inquest Set In 2 Air Deaths

Investigation of the death of two Anacostia Naval Air Station machinist's mates in an air crash Wednesday at Langley Field, Va., will be handled by an inquest board appointed at the Hampton Roads Operating Naval Base, Navy Yard officials here said yesterday.

Although the Washington Navy Yard has jurisdiction over the plane, the Hampton Roads Naval Base was felt to have prior jurisdiction in that the accident occured in the Fifth Naval District.

The men, Jack Ware and Edward Lyle Gosney, were killed Wednesday when their plane, a land-type training ship, fell into the Back River near Langley Field. The plane had landed at the field on a training flight and hopped off again, presumably to return to Washington.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Betty Read.

Now there is a patent to anesthetize oysters!

And the patentee is no less than Dr. Herbert F. Pyrtherch of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, stationed in Beaufort, N. C. as the director of the fisheries laboratory there. His co-worker and co-patentee is Vera Koehring, who last year left the Government service, where she was associated with Dr. Pyrtherch, to take a job in the Deaconess Hospital in Boston.

The patent is simply listed as a method of opening bivalves, but the story is that it is a method of narcotizing an oyster by a chemical solution bath that relaxes the muscles and the oyster pops open without chipping the shell, cutting your hands to ribbons or losing your temper—the usual procedure when oysters are to be shucked around any household. It works on the same muscle relaxing principle as using ether or any other anesthetic on a hospital patient.

The patent is aimed primarily for the oyster industry, which is one of fair proportions in the country, but it holds possibilities for the average housewife. At the Bureau of Fisheries it was explained that the solution is not harmful to the oyster and does not alter its taste, but is a simple method of doing a job which at present takes considerable skill, strength and time.

A Prismostereophorometer!

Another patent recently granted to a Government employee is one to Arthur W. Loy, of the Navy Department, for prismostereophorometer. That impressive word, in less scientific language, is a device for determining the degree of depth preception of aviators—three-dimension preception.

Patents granted to other Government workers:

To Harvey C. Hayes, Commerce, for a super-sensitive sound-detecting apparatus, employing radio tubes, the apparatus being practically free of static.

To Edmond C. Buckley, Navy, for a quick-acting valve, which will open and close in a very short period, for taking samples of the contents of internal-combustion engine cylinders during various steps in the operation of the engine.

To Mayne R. Coe, Agriculture, for a process for the preservation of rubber by incorporating chlorophyll green (found in plant leaves) which will excludde from the rubber all wave lengths of light except certain ones quite harmless to the rubber.

To Wilbur T. Harding, War, for a focusing sight for properly positioning the lamp filaments in incandescept lamps.

Tell How White Is White.

How white is white? Well, ask the officials of the Bureau of Standards and they will explain their new method of determining that. It's value is in estimating various kinds of white paints—the kind father might like to use on the outside of the house or mother for the kitchen walls.

The method is to paint over black and white squares on a big board until the black squares can no longer be seen, as shown in the illustration. The can of paint is weighed before and after the experiment, and the scientists in the department say the better the paint, the less it takes to cover black spots.

The Veterans' Administration Lodge, No. 17, of the American Federation of Government Employes, last night passed a resolution condemning the executive committee of the Central Labor Union of Washington for its attempt to exclude all A. F. G. E. lodges from direct representation to the Central Labor Union.

The resolution pointed out that this intepretation of the constitution of the American Federation of Labor is not being applied to other local unions in the country and, if carried out, would establish a dangerous precedent.

On the Air Today

Give a good radio man a little rope and he'll ring a bell with it—even when the subject is as far removed from routine commercial program production as a national political convention.

One of the network slaves here in Washington listened the other night to Senator Steiwer's keynote address. The theme of "three long years" appealed to his sense of showmanship and, after the Senator was through, an idea kept forming in vague form in his mind. A capitalizing of that phrase—"three long years."

You can almost see what praphrasing naturally took place. "Three Blind Mice," of course. And forthwith, the radio man dashed off a couple of verses to the tune of that old round—and telegraphed them to the Senator at Cleveland.

By evening the idea had passed from Steiwer's hands (apparently, at least) to those in charge of publicity at the convention and Wednesday evening, when the convention finally broke down and acted like a political gathering, the parody on "Three Blind Mice" was not only played and sung but was quite the talk of network announcers.

The radio man's name? Well, we won't go into that. Radio people are not paid to take "sides" in political scraps. But they can't resist offering a grand idea when it pops in mind. Just for the fun of it.

N. B. C. reports that Dorothy Thompson, wife of Sinclair Lewis, is stealing the show at Cleveland. Many persons have phoned the local office of the network to report Miss Thompson's comments and interviews of keen interest. And speaking of the Republican Convention, the programs from the hall continue to change from original schedules at the last moment, thereby throwing the proverbial monkey wrench into regular weekly and daily features. Some of the features scheduled in the time table on this page may not be heard today because of convention broadcasts.

That may have been a bad steer I gave you a few days ago about short wave, reference having been made to catching some of the late network shows to the West Coast on the short-wave band. Two nights this past week have found an earnest and determined gentleman on both 25 and 19 meters (at one and the same time) calling lustily for the elusive "C Q." He identifies himself as W-something-EUS—E for England, U for United and S for States, as he will tell anyone trying to get foreign reception on those frequencies. The "Something," I believe, is the number, 4, or 3. I wonder—with al the frequencies available for ham operation—why "everyone's Uncle Sam" has to pick out 25 and 19 meters for his operation?

Garbo at Last Achieves That Public Escape

Complete Obscurity Marks Her Return to Coast; Hollywood Notes.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, June 11.—Believe it or not, this film colony at last is treating Greta Garbo, ranking export of Sweden, to the complete privacy for which she has so often publicly yearned.

Since glamorous Greta pulled in a month ago from the land where the lumberjacks come from, hardly so much as an eyebrow has been raised in her direction.

"I do not wish to be unkind, but crowds crush and stifle me," G. G. told a handful of reporters who met her when she detrained at San Bernardino, 50 miles inland. "I do not want to talk to everyone I do not know."

Hollywood has shown utterly no desire to crush or stifle her, and few whom she does not know have tried to talk to her. There is some doubt that she even is in town. She has been seen nowhere, and her high-fenced home in Santa Monica looks deserted. But whether or no, nobody seems to care.

Studio Not Excited.

Her studio, M-G-M, is least excited of all save when some peevish fan magazine editor calls. (One fan mag reporter obtained a purported exclusive interview soon after Garbo's arrival.) To inquiries, studiomen repeat resignedly, "We don't know where she is. She's due to report for work next Monday and will probably show up. She usually does."

Even after G. G. goes to work on "Camille" the studio won't know where to locate her. Her calls are always given her personally before she leaves the set, and in case of emergency the only thing to do is call up Salka Viertel, screen writer and old friend of the Swede. Viertel sometimes knows Greta's rapidly changing telephone number.

Shirley's Squelcher.

Shirley Temple is learning all the answers fast. Wrangling with Boots McCracken, assistant director, the 7-year-old pulled a sour face and cracked: "If you don't behave yourself, Boots' I'll have you assigned to Simone Simon's next picture."

---

Looks as if Will James, the cowboy artist, will become a movie costume designer by remote control.

Some years ago, arguing with Cecil B. DeMille over the proper position of a cowpoke's arms while riding a pitching bronco, James covered a Brown Derby Cafe tablecloth with sketches illustrating his contentions.

DeMille cannily bought the cloth and had it framed. Now he has turned it over to Dwight Franklin, designer, as inspiration for costumes in the coming sagebrush epic currently called "The Plainsman."

---

Just to show you what movie-makers are up against, Mark Sandrich and Pandro S. Berman are hunting high and low for two lantern-jawed little girls, two and five years old, to play the daughter of Katharine Hepburn at those ages in "Portrait of a Rebel." As if that weren't enough the youngsters have to bear a speaking likeness to Herbert Marshall, who is to be their picture papa.

Cutting Room Scraps.

After two months' practice with a .22, Warner Baxter has armed himself with a high-powered rifle, and will shortly be off to Alaska with William Powell to shoot, (or at least shoot at) Kodiak bears.

Gladys George is back in pictures, having left the legitimate "Personal Appearance," in San Francisco.

Antonio Moreno has returned from Spain.

Music Teachers Will Honor Liszt

Marking the second anniversary of its foundation, the Washington Music Teachers Association will hold its final meeting of the season at 8:30 this evening in the Arts Club. The program will commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the death of Franz Liszt, July 31, 1886, in Bayreuth. In accordance with custom, this final program will be presented by members only.

Mme. Marie von Unsculd, former court pianist to Queen Elizabeth of Rumania, and a recognized exponent of Liszt's compositions for pianoforte, will play the E flat major concerto, the thirteenth "Rhapsodie Hongroise" and the "Echo" etude based on Paganini. The orchestral part of the concerto will be reproduced from a gramophone recording, with foot control invented by Mme. von Unschuld.

Elena de Sayn will speak on the subject, "Some Memories of Franz Liszt and Princess Sayn-Wittgenstein." Ruby Smith Stahl, accompanied by Willa Semple, will sing "Die Lorelei."

'But Don't Go Near the Water!'

Although it has nothing to do with her current picture, this stunning new camera study of Joan Blondell rather bears down on the Indian motif. She is posed on a Navajo rug and her swanky, silk-rubber swim suit is decorated with an Indian design—all of which, it may be repeated, has nothing whatever to do with the high hilarity of "Sons o' Guns," the new film comedy starring Joe E. Brown, in which the ebullient Miss Blondell will be seen on the screen at the Earle Theater, beginning today. Wini Shaw, recently at the Earle in person, also is in the cast—but in no such bathing suit!

About the Showshops

DISPOSSESSED and summarily ejected from the hallowed home that has been theirs for half a century or more, the Daguerrean likenesses of the great of the stage when the living theater was in its heyday this week have been trudging the highways and byways of the District in quest of a new abode where they can resume their honorable vigil upon some friendly wall.

BELL.

In this noble company are Sarah Bernhardt, the "Divine Sarah," Coquelin, her leading man in many triumphs; Sir Henry Irving and Dame Ellen Terry, Joseph Jefferson, as he appeared in "Rip Van Winkle" and "The Rivals"; Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott, James K. Hackett and Mary Mannering, Francis Wilson, that gentle English actor; E. S. Willard, remembered for his "Professor's Love Story" and "The Middleman"; Annie Russell, Mrs. Gilbert, Ethel Barrymore, one of drama's first ladies; John Drew, the most impeccable thespian of his day; the nimble-witted and barbed-tongued Wilton Lackaye, whose Svengali was a classic and "The Pit" a sensational effort; Virginia Harned, the first Mrs. E. H. Sothern; Julia Marlowe, the second; Mrs. Fiske, Henrietta Crosman, Kyrle Bellew, first of the platinum matinee idols, who made a gentleman of "Raffles"; Hattie Williams and Sam Bernard, whose "Piggy" Hoggenheimer was a dialectic masterpiece of mutilated English in musical comedy a quarter-century ago—the list could go on interminably.

Of the more recent era in the playhouse are Billie Burke, Lillian Russell, Julia Sanderson, Donald Brian, Raymond Hitchcock, the various distinguished members of almost a dozen companies of the National Theater Players; Nazimova, recently seen in a revival of Ibsen's "Ghosts"; George M. Cohan, Walter Hampden, Eva Le Gallienne, Jane Cowl, Ina Claire and so on and on and on.

The history of the American theater can be accurately and romantically traced through the likenesses that appear in this nationally celebrated collection of stage portraits collected by the Rapleys, father and son, through two generations and many decades of theater management. From among them peer out many cartoon drawings of the late William Harryman Rapley by Berryman, Weeks, Herndon Davis and others of local note.

And why are all of these celebrities who have lent luster to the theater down through the years in search of a new home over which to cast their aura of romance, tragedy and smiles? Because Manager Cochran, on behalf of the Erlanger Estate, which controls the National Theater property, has just executed a new rental lease for the E street facade of the theater's upper structure which includes the executive suite of offices on the second floor that have been the rendezvous for years of actors, managers, agents, newspaper writers and a large segment of the unattached laity.

The opening of the new season at the National will find the lobby thickly splashed with salty tears of sorrow!

* * * *

In the meantime, the prized picture collection is being carefully cached against the early day when it can be installed with due ceremony in the new summer theater Panjandrum Cochran is rearing on the Darby Farm, out the Georgia avenue pike toward Norbeck, Md. This will add at least one familiar and homey touch to an enterprise that will present much in the way of novelty and innovation to stamp it as unique among the Capital's theatrical projects.

* * * *

Speaking of the likes of that serves as a reminder that on Monday night the Roadside Theater, out the Rockville Pike beyond Bethesda, Md., and hard by the Georgetown Prep School, will inaugurate its third summer of "barn" drama with Jules Verne's variegated melodrama of "Around the World in 80 Days."

Miss Kitty Prichard, whose agile talents are dedicated to the Roadside's proper emblazonment on public consciousness—she is the press agent, to be brutal about it—calls up in a slight dither to announce the helpful coincidence of a certain Frenchman's current attempt to circumnavigate the globe in precisely Mr. Verne's 80 days.

I do not perceive precisely what this has to do with it, but look forward to an enlivening evening in the upper reaches of the spacious cowshed just the same.

Universal's superlatively excellent new production of Edna Ferber's "Show Boat" having clinched its right to a fourth consecutive week at RKO-Keith's by maintaining the highest general average of attendance of any of its predecessors in the long-run category, Bobby Breen and Henry Armetta will not be seen on Fifteenth street in "Let's Sing Again" until a week from today, June 19. With this bill will be offered the new release of "The March of Time", in which is included the case history of "Joseph Krutz", a study in the underprivileged in which the Washington Community Chest is especially interested since through their boys' clubs and other agencies they are dealing constantly with many such boys whose chance of growing to useful maturity is only one in ten. It is Harry Hites, director of publicity for the Chest, who points out that his office would be glad if every citizen of Washington might see this film.

* * * *

The wreckers, as you may have noticed, have thrown the ne' over the remaining buildings necessary to clear the site for the new Trans-Lux Theater that will rear itself on the old Oxford Hotel location on New York avenue, Fourteenth and H streets. It won't be long now.

Relentless Logic Note.

"THE LAW IN HER HANDS"
"AND SO THEY WERE MARRIED"

Human Bones Dug Up During Excavation

Sixth Precinct police were startled yesterday when a steam shovel, working on an excavation at Fourteenth street and Ford road northwest, uncovered several human bones. The police thought it might be a murder mystery.

Investigation in the office of the District engineer relieved their minds when it was learned the site formerly was used as a burial ground.

Rowan Assumes Navy Yard Job; Defrees Leaves

Colorful Ceremony Marks Change of Commands; Latter Here 3 Yrs.

Guns of the Washington Navy Yard boomed out three 13-gun salutes yesterday as part of the colorful maritime ritual of the change of high commands.

A few minutes later, on board the submarine tender U. S. S. Bushnell, Rear Admiral Cyrus W. Cole, who is being succeeded by Admiral Defrees as commander of the Submarine Force, hauled down his admiral's flag and the guns boomed a second time.

The third salute was fired when Admiral Defrees ordered his flag to be run up the Bushnell's mast. The tender will remain at the Navy Yard, open to public inspection, until Monday, when it will carry the new submarine commander to New London, Conn., for the first leg of his inspection tour of submarine bases. Admiral Cole is to head the Navy Yard at Portsmouth, N. H.

Capt. Rowan will remain in acting command of the Navy Yard here until the arrival of Rear Admiral George T. Pettengill, who is being transferred from command of the Second Battleship Division.

Widow Will Get Major Portion Of Beale Estate

Mrs. Marie Oge Beale, wife of the late Truxtun Beale, diplomat and world traveler, will receive the major portion of his estate, it was learned in the District Supreme Court when the will, found among Beale's papers in a safety deposit box, was filed. Since no petition for its probate was offered, it was not possible to estimate the value of the estate.

Beale, who died June 2 at his Annapolis, Md., summer home, directed that the sword of honor and epaulettes that were left him by his father, Edward Fitzgerald Beale, Mexican War hero, should go to his widow. Among others of his prized collection of mementos that she is to get are a Japanese sword and Arabian horseshoe presented to Beale's father by Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, a pair of dueling pistols, paintings, engravings and the noted Truxtun urn.

Mrs. Beale also is to have the family residence at San Rafael, Calif., and the Washington residence, located at 28 Jackson place.

The will contained the suggestion that Mrs. Beale might, if she desired, give some portion of the estate to either Emergency or Garfield Hospital, the amount to be left to her discretion, although there was a provision in the testament that, should she predecease him, $250,000 should go to one of the hospitals for a memorial annex where free treatment of worthy poor patients is to be provided.

The Washington Animal Rescue League was given $6,000; Mrs. John Pendleton, of Baltimore, $15,000; Katrina Beale, of West Chester, Pa., $5,000, and there were numerous smaller bequests to friends and relatives. Several servants will share the farm in Anne Arundel County, Md. During his diplomatic career, Beale served as envoy to Persia, Greece, Rumania and Serbia.

4 Held by Police In 'Numbers' Raid

Three men and a woman, all colored, were charged with operating a lottery and released on $2,000 bond yesterday when the Vice Squad raided an alleged numbers establishment in the 1300 block Ninth street northwest.

Those charged, John A. Boone, 38, of the 900 block O street northwest; Booker Cureton, 21, first block of Florida avenue northwest; Charles Williams, 37, 1300 block Ninth street northwest, and Ella Sue Williams, 20, of the 1300 block Ninth street, were seized in a rear room when police entered.

Rural Women Visit 9 Federal Agencies

Foreign delegates to the recent triennial conference of the Associated Country Women of the World yesterday wound up their two weeks' stay in Washington by visiting nine Federal agencies and bureaus which are giving direct service to farm homes and to rural homemakers.

Dr. Louise Stanley, chief of the Bureau of Home Economics, conducted a group through the Department of Agriculture's laboratories.

Three divisions of the Department of Labor were thrown open to the overseas visitors.

The foreigners also visited the Farm Credit Administration, the Women's Division of WPA, the United States Public Health Service, the Rural Electrification Administration, the Central Housing Committe, the United States Office of Education and the Resettlement Administration.

The foreign conference delegates are leaving this morning for a two days' stay at Cornell University.

Finland Again Lone Debt-Paying Nation

By the Associated Press.

Lone exception to the ranks of defaulting European debtors, Finland yesterday maintained intact its record for prompt payment by informing the United States its June 15 installment of $164,315 would be paid on that date.

The formal notification from the Finnish Legation evoked an expression of gratification from Secretary Hull that the Baltic republic was continuing its policy of meeting obligations.

In view of its attitude in the past, the Secretary of State said at his press conference, the official Finnish announcement was not surprising.

Jane Cowl Will Take Complete 'Lady' on Tour

Holds Only Mediocrity Is Taboo on "The Road;" Miss Gill's Case.

Jane Cowl, who is to make a coast-to-coast tour next season in "First Lady," in which she is still appearing at the Musix Box Theater in New York, has her own ideas about the alleged death of "the road." She expressed herself forcibly on the subject to an interviewer recently.

"The road isn't dead," she said. "It is simply spleeping. It has been swindled and disappointed so often by shoddy road companies presenting good New York plays that the provincial theatergoers are very justifiably inclined to steer clear of most traveling attractions.

"When I go on tour with 'First Lady' we will take the entire New York production, as we did with 'Romeo and Juliet,' which was complete right down to the last button on Mercutio's shoes and the last flare to light Capulet through the streets. I would not have agreed to make this tour if Sam Harris hadn't agreed to give the road exactly what New York audiences have been seeing for 30 weeks."

Miss Cowl will spend the months of July and August in England. She has a favorite spot in Dorset where she rusticates simply without thought of heed of hairdressers, luncheon appointments or obligatory parties which are required "musts" for successful stars during the New York season.

About Miss Gill.

About a month ago the "bring-back-Dorothy-Gill" campaign was launched in New York with the object of persuading the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company to include this popular contralto in its 1936 tour, opening on August 20 in New York. The Gilbert and Sullivan enthusiasts who remembered her fine work last year were bound that they would accept no substitute, and with true Savoyard zeal set about their self-imposed task of bringing her back.

Thousands of written requests for her return poured in from every city in which Dorothy Gill had been heard, and two delegates, Miss Alma Watson, lawyer, of 28 West Forty-fourth street, and Miss Gladys Ford, writer, of 411 East Fifty-eighth street, New York, are sailing for England on the Acquitania to present to Mr. Rupert D'Oyly Carte the tangible evidence that the American public is not afflicted with "a heart that does not know its mind" and that its mind in this instance is that it wants him to bring back Dorothy Gill.

Noted Petitioners.

Among those who have gone on record as desiring her return are Roger Baldwin, director of American Civil Liberties Union; Edith J. Isaacs, editor of Theater Arts Monthly; Rita Otway, president of Advertising Women of New York; David Loth, author of "Lorenzo, the Magnificent;" Arthur Guiterman, poet; Supreme Court Justice William Harman Black, Prof. William Lyon Phelps, Harry Hansen, literary editor of New York World-Telegram; Mme. Alma Clayburgh, singer; Joseph Wood Krutch, an editor of the Nation; Mitchell Kennerley, authority on graphic arts; James T. Farrell, author of "Studs Lonergan," and many others prominent in literary, artistic, musical, dramatic, educational and professional fields.

Chamberlain Rescues Boy From Park Lake

London, June 11 (AP).—Forgetting his gray tophot and morning coat, Neville Chamberlain, Britain's austere chancellor of the exchequer, waded knee-deep into St. James' Park lake today to rescue a 4-year-old boy.

Chamberlain was walking in the park, within sight of both Buckingham and St. James' palaces, when he heard a woman's screams.

He hurdled a railing, strode through the water, grasped the boy and handed him over to his mother.

Notable Stage Portraits Seek New Home

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

The Passing Show.

New York, June 11.

Twelve cans of film . . . And in those 12 flat cans, the entire record of show business, tracing the decline and fall of the legitimate Broadway stage . . . For instance, 12 cans of film will be delivered to the Ziefeld Theater Thursday midnight, and in those cans will be the celluloid transcript of "Show Boat," in 10,386 feet of film . . . There will be no fuss when the 12 cans of film arrive in a Film Delivery truck, just a routine stop, the signing of a receipt as two cases, each containing six cans, are unloaded and delivered . . . It was different when Florenz Ziegfeld presented the stage show on December 27, 1927, at the same theater.

FRED ASTAIRE.

* * * *

Back in 1927, during that week of feverish preparation, preceding the gala stage premiere of "Show Boat," the Ziegfeld Theater was a beehive of activity . . . Baggage trucks and express men were delivering trunks and bags and scenery . . . Thirty members of the cast were arguing about dressing rooms . . . Costumers and carpenters and stage hands and spotlight men were in a turmoil of activity . . . Box-office men and ushers and press agents and songwriters and musicians bumped into each other . . . The famous Ziegfeld alley, narrow stretch of pavement leading to the backstage entrance, was guarded by doormen to keep out pests and the autograph seekers . . . It was romantic, exciting, stimulating.

* * * *

But the new way is more profitable . . Hollywood crowds a cast of 650 extras and 17 principals into 12 cans of film, which will be delivered to 10,000 American theaters . . . No voice screams from those cans for the No. 1 dressing room . . . No member of the troupe in these cans of film will ever give an inferior performance during the run of the picture . . . No temperament will arise in those cans of film to harass the house manager . . . No railroad fares will have to be paid; no hotel bills.

* * * *

This is the new show business . . . Twelve cans of film . . . Three hundred copies are made in the Coast laboratories . . . Each copy will play perhaps 30 theaters before it loses its reproduction value, and before the sound track begins to lose its strength. In the silent days a single copy could play perhaps 60 different theaters before it had to be discarded . . . From December 27, 1927, to June 10, 1936, is less than nine years, but in that space of time the movies have wrapped up the legitimate stage and the musical comedy stage in 12 cans of film, and marked them F. O. B. Hollywood, where Cock Robin was killed.

* * * *

Johnny Black, who penned "Dardanella," was killed in a midnight row on the main street of a small Ohio town a few days ago . . . "Dardanella" was a smash hit as a lively fox trot . . . It sold over 1,000,000 copies of sheet music. Victor made 12 separate platter recordings of it, player-pianos throughout the land repeated it over and over.

* * * *

Black was one of Tin Pan Alley's famous one-song writers . . . He and Fred Fischer tried their hands at others, but they were flops . . . Irving Cahn, who penned "Yes, We Have No Bananas," was another historic example of a one-song writer . . . Guy Massey, whose "Prisoner's Song" sold 2,000,000 copies, never wrote another good one . . . Roy Hodgson's "The Music Goes 'Round and 'Round" clicked just before he died . . . Nat Bronx and Moe Jaffee, one a lawyer, the other a band leader, hit with "Collegiate," but that was finis.

* * * *

Irene Castle McLaughlin is in town en route to Paris . . .

Crowds still turn their heads to get a look at her in public places, for of all the women in the world, I guess she got the greatest publicity . . . RKO couldn't get a grander yarn than the story of Vernon and Irene Castle for Fred Astaire . . . Vernon Castle was the Astaire of his generation, and Mrs. McLaughlin tells me that he was even greater as an eccentric dancer and sleight-of-hand artist than as a ballroom dancer . . . "He was one of those rare persons who could do anything well," she tells you . . . It would be a magnificent scenario for Fred Astaire, and more than ordinary drama in the reproduction of the airplane crash which entered a gold star in the casualty rolls of the British Royal Flying Corps, for Castle died at a Texas field, training Yankee eagles.

* * * *

Add Water-Under-the-Bridge Items: When Mayor LaGuardia goes to West Point to attend the graduation exercises of the last two boys appointed by him to the Academy, he will meet Gen. John J. Pershing . . . It will be the first meeting of the two men since LaGuardia rejected Pershing's invitation to become a member of his Headquarters Staff in France . . . LaGuardia turned it down because he wanted to see front-line action.

Deputies Adopt Blum Program To End Strikes

Overwhelming Majorities Given to Bargaining, Pay Rise Legislation.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 11.—The Chamber of Deputies by overwhelming majorities approved tonight most of Premier Leon Blum's social reform measures designed to end widespread strikes.

In a seven-hour session the Chamber hurriedly voted laws giving the workers paid vacations, exempting war veterans from certain taxes, eliminating pay cuts of government employes and providing for collective labor contracts.

A bill for a 40-hour week, which has met the most opposition, was held over until tomorrow for discussion, when Blum will ask a vote of confidence for his new Leftist government.

All measures passed tonight must be approved by the Senate. They were passed by overwhelming majorities in the Chamber, the biggest opposition being seven negative votes in the case of the collective labor contract law.

Restaurants Closed.

While the lawmakers debated, restaurants, cafes and bars of the capital were closed by strikers. Domestic servants threatened to walk out.

Fear the strike movement might get out of control of the Labor Federation was expressed in lobbies of the Chamber, where opposition deputies cited the refusal of insurance workers to return to their jobs after reaching an agreement with their employers.

New strikes broke out both in the capital and the provinces on the seventeenth day of the occupation by workers of many factories.

4 Dead in Spain.

Madrid, June 11 (AP).—The assassination of a high official of the Province of Malaga and another slaying brought the total of dead in two days of fighting there between Syndicalists and Communists to four tonight.

At the same the 4-month-old Leftist national government, harassed by strikes and disorders, announced it had crushed a Rightist movement in seven provinces.

Legislator Slain.

Antonio Roman Reina, 62, president of the Malaga Provincial Parliament, was assassinated as he crossed a bridge en route to the Parliament building. A companion, Rodrigo Lara Valejo, Communist councilor, was attacked but escaped unhurt.

Despite heavy police forces patrolling the streets of Malaga, sporadic fighting broke out and several persons were injured.

Communists and Socialists had given orders to their followers to end a general strike, but fear of reprisals by Syndicalists kept most of the activities of the city paralyzed.

Nursemaid Tactics.

Nothing that can happen at the bridge table infuriates an expert so much as to be "taken care of" by a partner. Disputes over questions of bidding or play rarely become acrimonious unless there is the certainty, or even strong suspicion, that either partner has assumed arbitrarily the position of nursemaid, treating the other as a backward child. Resentment over this is, to say the least, natural. The insult is no less great because it is merely implied. Recently I witnessed a controversy of this nature over the hand shown below.

The bidding:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 3 spades | 4 hearts | Pass | Pass |
| Double | Pass | 4 spades | Pass |
| Pass | Pass | | |

South's unconventional three-spade bid (this was before the release of the new two-way three bid) was based on his intimate knowledge of West's bridge psychology. He knew West to be a player who absolutely refuses to be "shut out" as long as he holds the semblance of a bid, and therefore deliberately trapped him by making a supposed preemptive bid on a goob defensive hand. He was fortunate enough to catch West with a really tempting hand. To his joy, South not only heard four hearts (of all suits!) bid, but was further delighted when his own partner, North, had to pass.

South visualized the set of the century as he made his penalty double and his disappointment on hearing North take the double out to four spades can only be imagined. The fact that four spades went down to ignominious defeat when East-West amassed two heart tricks, one diamond trick, and a heart ruff by East, was only a little extra fuel on an already blazing fire.

South's opening gun was: "Partner, let me just understand one thing. Do you or do you not recognize a penalty double?"

North probably was not feeling up to snappy repartee, and merely answered: "Generally, yes. But considering that your first bid was a sign of defensive weakness, I didn't think you could beat four hearts with my miserable hand."

"O, I see! And you also thought that, having bid for nine tricks, I couldn't stretch things a bit and bid for ten if I felt there was a reasonable chance of West making four hearts, and a vulnerable game! You thought I doubled because I couldn't figure out what else to do! Well, all I have to say is that you thought us out of 1,150 points!"

He was quite right. Good defense would have defeated the four heart contract four tricks. Two spades, two clubs and two trumps would have been inevitable, and North's nine of hearts would have accounted for another trick by forcing declarer to ruff with an honor when South, after cashing the club ace, should continue with spade leads.

Today's Question.

Question: What is the correct bid on the following hand:

Spade, 3; heart, 6, 5; diamond, A, K, Q, J, 9, 4, 2; club, A, Q, 5?

Answer: Three diamonds, a new two-way three bid. (These bids were explained on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.)

Tomorrow's Hand.

Scientist Reports New 'Immortality'

New York, June 11 (AP).—A test tube way to produce true suspended animation, in which bits of living flesh neither grow old nor die, was announced tonight by Raymond C. Parker, of the Rockefeller Institute.

The suspended animation is a new step in the "immortality" which scientists have been able to make in test tubes for many years. In these tubes bits of living tissue, either animal or plant, live and grow as long as they are fed.

In this "immortal" growth, the new parts have to be constantly removed to prevent the bit of tissue from growing literally to the size of a house, or so big it cannot be cared for.

By the new discovery the bit of tissue remains alive and unchanged indefinitely without growing. The discovery is valuable for biologists in studying the functions of living cells.

Wedding to Gertrude Faust Solemnized in Church of Epiphany.

Miss Burke Will Attend Sister in Marriage to Louis C. Bean.

This is a week of weddings, not only in Washington, but also in points north and west, where several marriages of interest to Capital society are scheduled to take place.

The wedding yesterday of Miss Gertrude Faust, daughter of Mrs. Frederick de Courcy Faust, to Lieut. Andrew Hero 3d, son of Maj. Gen. Andrew Hero, jr., retired, was extremely quiet, owing to the recent death of the bride's father. Only members of the immediate families were present at the ceremony, which took place in the chancel of Epiphany Church, the Rev. ZeBarney Phillips officiating. Lieut. Hero and his bride will sail within a few days for France, where the former is attached to the American Embassy in Paris as a student of French, preparatory to teaching the subject at West Point.

Miss Barbara Burke, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, will be maid of honor and only attendant at the wedding of her sister, Miss Beatrice Burke, to Mr. Louis C. Bean, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis M. Bean, of Augusta County, Va. Neither the time nor the place of the wedding has been definitely set. The ceremony will take place either Sunday or Monday, depending upon Senator Burke's plans to return to the Capital, and although it was originally scheduled to be held in the chapel of Beloit University, Beloit, Wis., owing to the fact Miss Burke has not established legal residence in Beloit, it may take place in Rockford, Ill., instead. Dr. Edward Eaton, for whom the chapel is named, will perform the ceremony.

Senator Burke, who was graduated from the university 30 years ago, will see his daughter, Barbara, receive her diploma there this week.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Northwestern University and a member of Theta Upsilon Sorority. Mr. Bean was graduated from the University of Alabama and attended Georgetown University and the University of Virginia. After a wedding trip through the Northern States, he and his bride will reside in Washington.

Before her marriage, Mrs. Landis was Miss Syvie Moorhead. She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Richard W. Hughes. The wedding, which took place in the Walter Reed Chapel, was performed by the Rev. C. C. Vaughan, of Newberry, S. C., an uncle of the bride, assisted by Chaplain Miller of Walter Reed Chapel.

The maid of honor was Miss Margaret Bain, of Edinburgh, Scotland. The bridesmaids were Mrs. M. M. Menefee and Miss Violet Hughes, sister of the bride. Miss Margaret Moorhead and Miss Mary Virginia Jett.

And Call It Accident

By Mrs. Belloe Lowndes

SYNOPSIS.

Though her childhood sweetheart, faithful George Dwight, pleads with her to come home to America and marry him, Ruth Starling insists on staying in London and using her recently inherited wealth to go on the stage. Her London lawyer, Mr. Singleton, and Mrs. Singleton, arrange for Ruth and George to have dinner with Capt. Philip Trefane and his wife, Iris. Capt. Trefane is interested in theatricals, though short of capital. His aunt, the Marchioness of Cicester, is loaning the Trefanes her old Cornwall castle for the summer and Mr. Singleton suggests they might take Ruth as a paying guest, though he warns her to leave financial arrangements in his hands.

Chapter Two.

IRIS TREFANE belonged to a type of girl and woman rare in England, though only to be found in England. She was slight to emaciation, and yet there was nothing bony or scraggy about her, and her white skin had a kind of luminous underglow.

The most striking features of the perfect oval of her face were her eyes. In the daylight, as Ruth was soon to learn, they appeared of a blue-green tint, and could change her face in a moment from an expression of suffering gravity to one full of impish mischief. At night they appeared mysterious, fathomless pools of beauty. Tonight her lips had been tinted to exactly the same color as the red frock she was wearing, but she was far less made up than mose of the other women there.

Always, up to the very end of their acquaintance, the personality and appearance of Iris Trefane was to intrigue and interest Ruth Starling, and also to the end she would wonder whether the auburn tints of that naturally curling hair, worn long and done in a tight bun in the base of the neck, were entirely natural.

Iris, beautiful as she was, did not look young. Indeed, she nearly always looked older than her husband; but, as is always the case with the Englishwoman belonging to that exotic type of starlit loveliness, she had a genius for appearing to advantage. Often her frocks, when off, looked as if they had come out of a ragbag, but when on they might have been chosen from the trousseau of a princess in a fairy tale.

An Arresting Voice.

Suddenly Capt. Trefane observed: "I'm afraid we must go downstairs if any of us want to dance, for soon the floor will be so crowded that we shan't be able to move."

And then, for the first time, there fell on Ruth's ears that singular, low, individual voice which she was to come to know so well, for Mrs. Trefane drawled out: "I think that I and Mr. Dwight"—she threw the young man a fleeting, beckoning smile—"had better take Mr. and Mrs. Singleton down to the ball-room, so that we can secure a table. You and Miss Starling, Phil, can follow in a few minutes."

"That's a good idea, darling. I think Miss Starling and I ought to have a short talk, and one can't hear oneself speak down there."

Mr. Singleton threw the speaker a sharp, indeed an apprehensive glance. He had intended to be present at the first conversation between Ruth and Philip Trefane, and once more there arose in his mind a feeling of misgivings as to whether he was not making a mistake in bringing this confiding girl in touch with such a man as he knew this man to be. And yet the plan had had to his mind the great advantage that at any rate he thought he knew the worst of Trefane, and that Trefane was aware that this was so.

Ruth Likes Trefane.

A glow of keen anticipation permeated Ruth Starling as she followed the man to whom she had just been introduced into a cozy corner obviously meant to hold just two people at right angles the one to the other. Already she liked Capt. Trefane; his look of unobtrusive good breeding appealed to her; also his manner, which was quiet and unaffected, inspired her with confidence. She suddenly felt a sensation of pained resentment remembering the way his aunt, Lady Cicester, had spoken of him in her letter.

"Mr. Singleton has told me something of your wishes and plans, Miss Starling, and I have already prepared one or two alternate proposals to put before you."

"Have you really? How splendid!" she exclaimed.

He was looking at her fixedly. Mr. Singleton had told him extremely little concerning the personality of this girl. He had simply said that one of his New York friends had commended to his care an American actress who wished to make a London stage debut, and who was willing to pay a reasonable sum for the privilege of doing so.

"Mr. Singleton tells me you wish to put on a play in London as soon as our theatrical season opens, and that you have secured sufficient backing to do so," he said hesitatingly.

"I am going to be my own backer," and her smile was at once confident and confiding. Indeed, before he could speak again she exclaimed, "I am overjoyed to know that you are kind enough to be going to help me, Capt. Trefane!"

Watching her face intently, he observed: "If you are in a position to undertake a season of plays, I have heard today of a theater of which the short lease is to be sold at the end of September for an absurdly small sum."

He fully expected her to reply, "Oh, but I couldn't take the theater!" But to his inward delight she observed: "Do yo think that might be a good idea?"

He rejoined, allowing himself a touch of eagerness: "The purchase of the lease of a good London theater at this time of the world's history is a real investment, Miss Starling. There are always times in each year when there is a positive shortage of theaters, and a fancy rent per week can often be secured. Also, the owner of the theater lease can generally secure a share in any profits a play put on there by some one else may bring in. If you can afford to do so, I think you could not do better than buy the lease of the theater I have in mind."

Her listener could scarcely believe his ears.

"I shall be overjoyed to be in management again," he said sincerely. "And the good of actually owning a theater is that if a play on which one has built high hopes does not please the critics—and the public are a little apt to follow the critics blindly——"

"I know they are!" exclaimed Ruth in a resentful tone.

"Well? If a play is a failure, one can always put another play on, without having to find another theater."

"May I tell you now about the play of which I have bought the rights?" she asked eagerly.

Financial Warning.

"I think it would be better for you to read me the play, say some time tomorrow. By the way, where are you staying?"

"At the Savoy. Didn't Mr. Singleton tell you that?"

"No, he did not." Then he said firmly: "When I say the lease of the Mayfair theater is going cheap—I don't mean that it's going for nothing."

"Of course I understand that, Capt. Trefane? But——"

Ruth had suddenly remembered Mr. Singleton's warning as to leaving the financial side of her theatrical ventures in his hands.

"I think I should be able to afford whatever would be reasonable," she said at last.

"Have you fixed in your own mind how much money you are willing to risk? I feel sure Mr. Singleton has told you that all theatrical business, in this country especially, has its risky side. But a fortune can be made out of a successful play."

He was speaking almost mechanically now, while keeping a wary eye on the American girl, and noting every changing expression on her face.

Too Much Sun Is Dangerous For Children

Some Little Ones Burn Too Easily, Famous Doctor of Quints Warns.

SUNLIGHT, as every bathing beach for adults proves, can hurt as well as heal. Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe warns the mother readers of The Parents Magazine that sunbathing for small babies is not a foolproof blanket prescription. Says he:

"Some little ones, particularly those with very fair complexions and light hair, have skin which burns easily in the direct rays of strong sunshine. Some children should take sun treatment only when the direct rays of the sun are softened and radiated by clouds—or what is called skyshine—obtained on the north side of a building. This diffused light and the movement of the air on the bare skin is truly beneficial. Consult a doctor about sunbathing your child. Use caution and discretion if you would have your baby get the greatest benefit of sun rays."

Among the rules of baby care so brilliantly successful in bringing up his five famous little charges, the Dionne quintuplets' doctor considers his three-point code most important.

"Every baby, like the quintuplets, should live his life according to a simple, sensible, consistent system.

"Every baby should be protected by a policy of absolute cleanliness in his person.

"Every baby should have medical supervision from the time of birth, in order to obtain the benefit of constructive measures which are best for him, while untoward symptoms are nipped in the bud."

Woman Tells Of Working Around World

Recounts Thrills, Problems of Travel on Courage But Not Currency.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

OF THE THOUSANDS of women who have wanted to work their way around the world, Miss Ann Singleton is one of the few who have actually done it.

Recently speaking before the Business Women's Council of Washington, she recounted some of the thrills (and problems) of circling the globe on one's own. Yesterday in her paartment at the Pentilly she told more of how—"with more courage than currency"—she made her travel dreams come true by literally writing her way around the world.

Sometimes this was writing for a newspaper, as when she was correspondent for the Far Eastern Times in Peking and in Mukden; a number of times her pencil plied through pages of a secretary's notebook, as when she worked with a law firm in Honolulu, with a rubber company in Bombay and with a motor business in Java; occasionally her writing was on a stenographer's pad, as in Siam, when she took French dictation every weekday for three months.

No Difficulty Getting Jobs.

"But there was never any difficulty in getting a job," she said. "Wherever I happened to be, something further always opened up. I never had that fear of being stranded penniless on a foreign shore that assails so many Americans. I'm something of a fatalist," she added, a twinkle in her sky-blue eyes. "I feel you always see a way out—or a way on, as in my case—if you keep looking for it. I'm convinced that whatever you really want, you get."

As long as this Louisiana-born girl can remember, she wanted to see the world. She made up her mind she would, when she accepted her first position as a stenographer in Macon, Ga. She was more confident of it than ever when she went to Cuba to work for the Spanish Treaty Claims Commissioner, later went to England and eventually landed in France as secretary to Myron T. Herrick, Ambassador to France.

"In Paris, I saved $600 and planned to start with that on my trip around the world," she said. "I was about ready to leave when war was declared, and my money could not be taken out of the bank."

She then came back to the United States and went to Cleveland to work as secretary in a law firm. Then, still holding fast to her dream of seeing the world with or without money, she started for the West Coast, on her way to Honolulu.

Worked, Traveled by Plan.

"After I bought my ticket to Hawaii, I had less than $100," she said, "but that was a fortune compared with what I had three years later when I landed in Singapore with less than $5. My plan at the outset was to work six months in each country and save enough money to continue my trip. But that didn't always work out. Sometimes I stayed longer, sometimes less."

But on she went—from Honolulu to China, to Japan, back to China, on to Indo-China, India, Persia and Greece—always finding before she left one country that employment was waiting in another.

For example, when she was in Athens with the Hellenic Information Bureau, she heard the Rotarians were to have an international convention in Vienna and a position was open on the secretarial staff. A blue gold-lettered ribbon in her memory book is proof she got the job.

Saw Italy on $7.

She is grateful to Mussolini for having a chance to see Italy. While she was in Vienna, he encouraged tourist travel by cutting railroad rates in half through his country. "I went from the top of the boot down into the heel for $7," she said proudly," and glimpsed some of the most beautiful scenes of my whole journey."

Now in Washington working in a Government department, she has memories of a world tour made completely "on her own;" but her travels, she is confident, are not yet finished. "Some day I must see Mexico . . . and South America," she said. "Just how, I don't yet know."

Altered Manner Of Living Held Vacation Need

Psychology of Leisure Is More Important Than Change of Air.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

Father's vacation is three weeks long. Family funds are limited. How can a change for everyone be managed this summer?

Much depends on where the family lives. If their home is in a big city, the problem is more difficult than if they live in the country or suburbs, or in a small town.

In any event, a change of climate is not so essential as a change in the way of living. The psychology of leisure is more important than the air. Why not stay at home, with occasional days of picnic in the open, until father's vacation comes, and then start off as a family to enjoy the three weeks together?

Most families own a car, but few use it to the best advantage. All children study geography in some form, but few of them actually see what they study about. The three weeks could be well spent in touring some part of the country and learning practically about what has hitherto been an academic discussion.

STUFFED FLANK STEAK

2 pounds flank steak
1 cup bread crumbs
½ cup stock or water
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon chopped onion
1 small turnip, diced
½ cup chopped celery
1 small carrot, diced
Flour

The meat should be cut from one-half to 1 inch thick. Wipe the steak, remove skin and lay meat out flat on a board. Make a dressing of the crumbs, stock or water, salt, pepper, chopped onion and a small amount of celery and spread on the meat. Roll the steak with the grain, so that when it is cut it may be cut across the grain of the meat. Place the diced vegetables in a roasting pan and on them lay the rolled steak. Add two or three cups of water, depending upon the size of the pan. Cover and bake in a moderately slow oven (325 degrees F.) for 3 hours, or until tender.

If you prefer to cook this meat on top of the stove, melt one-half cup of suet in the bottom of a flat-bottomed iron or heavy aluminum kettle, flour the meat thickly and lay the roll in the kettle. Turn from side to side until it is well browned, then add hot water nearly to cover, and simmer slowly for 3 hours.

When the meat is cooked, remove it from the kettle or roasting pan and thicken the broth, using one to two tablespoons of flour to each cup of gravy.

Identical Twins Mentally Alike

In the way their brains work as well as in the way they look, identical twins are alike, two Harvard Medical School doctors told the American Medical Association at the recent Kansas City meeting. The doctors studied the brains of identical twins with a device that indicates the electrical activity of the brain and found that the patterns are almost exactly the same for each of the identical twins. In other individuals there is great variation.

Careful Hygiene May Bring Cure Of Constipation

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Among the many causes of constipation habit is probably the most important. People who are "sitters" and not "doers," who eat too much, take too little exercise, and neglect the call when it comes, rarely fail to exhibit the symptoms. Again, a diet that is so stimulating that it brings on a spasm of the colon, or one that provides but little residue, are factors. The presence of hemorrhoids is sometimes the only obstacle to normal action of the bowel, inasmuch as pain serves as a deterring influence.

All too often, with the first sign of constipation, the individual will take a laxative. By repeating the process periodically he brings on the condition known as spastic colon, in which the large bowel is in a state of more or less constant contraction. A colon that is constantly whipped by some irritating drug will sooner or later get out of the habit of doing its work well.

We must recall that the wavelike affair which propels food onward in the intestinal tube occurs automatically without the knowledge or consent of the individual. There is no pain under normal conditions. The whole matter is regulated by the sympathetic nervous system, which in turn governs the muscle of the bowel. The small intestine gradually fills the colon and from the colon material passes to the rectum. Then follows stimulation of certain nerve centers that convey the message that emptying the reservoir is demanded.

In planning our attack we must make certain that there is no obstruction to the onward movement of the intestinal contents, such as tumors, foreign bodies, strictures, adhesions, kinks, or chronic contractions. Most cases—provided no disease exists—can be managed by the patient himself, observing good hygienic rules.

Foremost is the acquisition of good habits. This means establishing a regular toilet routine. A proper regime on arising would be ten minutes of setting-up exercises or walking in the open air. Inasmuch as the rectum is reasonably well filled from half an hour to an hour after breakfast, the impulse should be heeded faithfully. Hurry and nervousness should give way to calm, orderly procedure. The time of day set aside for emptying the bowel should be varied as little as possible from day to day.

If the bowel is lazy, a so-called laxative diet may be needed.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

SHE ALWAYS gets tangled up with figures when she goes on a refurnishing jag. She measures and adds and multiplies till her head goes round and round . . . then ends up getting the nice little man in the upholstery department of her favorite store to figure up just how much material she does need.

ple, the rug a soft old blue, and there's a dado running around three walls of the room. The fourth wall is paneled and painted, with a fireplace. She's tired to death of the usual white painted wall and the usual little colonial medallion papers so often used for rooms like this. What could she do that would be different, she asked the little man in the upholstery department from whom she always buys her materials.

Well, said he, why not get one of those scenic papers in warm old tans and with touches of lightish blues, mellow reds and cream on a ground of deep tan. Then have the woodwork—doors, dado and paneled fireplace wall—all done in a cool light shade of blue. The sofa would be pleasant in snuff color, with yellow slip covers for two of the armchairs.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Should Middle-Aged Wife Abandon Comfortable Home Because of Husband's Verbal Abuse?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 41 and my husband is a few years older. We have three grown children, all employed. I worked for years until a few months ago. We own our own home and my husband makes a good wage. I have always been a good, true, faithful wife, and can look anyone in the face. Now my husband abuses me with his tongue, calling me vile names, and he has taken to frequenting drinking places.

* * * *

Although we have a very comfortable home we never have anyone in to call on us for we do not know how he will treat them. He is very abrupt in his manner. The children urge me to leave him, but I am a loss to know what to do. I pray God will show me some way out. MARY ANNA.

DEAR MARY ANNA: As I have said before in this column, peace and harmony in one's home life constitute a spiritual necessity of first importance. I believe whatever price one is called upon to pay for such pace is not too great a price to pay, provided one can afford to pay it. If you would not be jumping out of the frying pan into the fire in leaving your husband, then you should indeed give serious consideration to the idea of living apart from him.

The common-sense thing for you to do is to take your problem to a lawyer; or, if you are without funds, consult the Legal Aid Society, 1010 Vermont avenue northwest, the Denrike Building, and learn whether you have sufficient grounds either for divorce or separate maintenance. It seems to me the only possible immunity you can establish against your husband's outbursts is to live apart from him. To do this you would either have to have a compulsory allowance from him for support; or you would have to be self-supporting; or you would have to look to your children for support. If the latter are all grown and self-supporting, it is to be expected that they will eventually be planning homes of their own, and it would not be advisable for you to settle down on their bounty for the remainder of your lifetime. To do so might be to find your last state worse than your first.

* * * *

Perhaps if your husband was confronted with the possibility of losing his wife and the comfort of his home, he might see the necessity of making some reform. It is possible he might have more respect for you, stand more in awe of you, if you were to reenter the business world. If it is impossible or inadvisable for you to seek a divorce or separate maintenance, the next best thing to do may be to find a job again and, while living under the same roof as your husband, live as much apart from him as possible in spirit. When he has his ugly outbursts, simply leave the house and stay away overnight if his tantrums seem to warrant such a move. Don't try to placate him or argue with him. Just ignore him when he is in such moods. M. H.

Conflict Here?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Isn't there some conflict when you recommend to a correspondent that he read the writings of both Dr. W. Beran Wolfe and Basil King? My interpretation of Dr. Wolfe's teachings is that if you find yourself taking comfort in Basil King's philosophy you would better lose no time in seeing a psychiatrist. READER.

* * * *

DEAR READER: Obviously, my intent in suggesting to the correspondent referred to that he read several authors was that he acquaint himself with different methods of achieving a happy adjustment to life. After that, it is up to the person himself to choose the one he believes best suited to his own temperament and theorizing. M. H.

* * * *

Too-Secretive Suitor.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am an unmarried woman who for some months, went out with a young man a few years my senior. We had many interests in common, music, sports, religion, etc. I met him in a conventionally proper way. Recently I learned that he has been married and divorced and has a child, facts of which I had no inkling but which I understand were common knowledge to many who knew our friendship. While he was not the only man who paid me attentions, and not the only man with whom I went out socially, still, it seems to me as a matter of honor he should have been frank about his background, inasmuch as we were together several times a week.

* * * *

Under the circumstances, it seems to me the only course left open to me, now that I have learned the truth, is to refuse to be seen in his company in future. Please give me your opinion at once, as I must decide on a course of action without delay. WAITING.

* * * *

DEAR WAITING: As I see it, this young man displayed a certain amount of moral cowardice and intent to deceive in being secretive about his past, and he deserves a suitable rebuke. Also, it is logical to assume that if he would deceive you in one matter, he would probably deceive you in any other which happened to suit his purpose. Therefore, if you are sufficiently disinterested in him to have the courage to refuse to see him again, I would certainly advise you to do just that. M. H.

P. U. C. to Get Phone Data In Rate Fight

D. C. Offers Information Showing A. T. & T. Relationship.

Roberts Reveals Move to Aid Rate Reduction Battle by F. C. C.

Valuable data gathered by the Federal Communications Commission showing the relationship of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. with its parent, the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and other subsidiary concerns, will be brought to the aid of the Public Utilities Commission in its move to reduce telephone rates, William A. Roberts, people's counsel, said in a memorandum to the commission yesterday.

"Launching of the investigation by the commission comes at a particularly appropriate time when the valuable data prepared by the Federal Communications Commission is becoming available and the commission is to be congratulated on its action," Roberts said.

"I believe," he declared in his memorandum, "the public will highly approve. For myself I would like to extend every possible cooperation to the commission in the conduct of its investigation."

Riley E. Elgen, commission chairman, started the rate reduction move in a letter sent on Wednesday to the telephone company in which he said the company seemed to be making much more than the allowed 6 per cent return on its rate valuation basis. During the last calendar year the company earned a net return of $2,175,000. The commission ordered reductions in rates estimated to amount to $300,000 this year. During the first four months of this year the company reported a net operating revenue of $785,000, exclusive of taxes, as compared with $741,000 during the same period last year.

Pertinent data gathered by the Federal Communications Commission, Roberts said, includes "the costs of apparatus purchased from the Western Electric Co., the analysis of the division between the local company and the long lines division of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., certain pensions reserves, and, above all others, the depreciation reserve."

Chevy Chase Group Votes Club House

Members of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, Md., voted yesterday to authorize members of the official board to proceed to negotiate for land upon which a clubhouse is to be constructed. The meeting, held in Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, was presided over by Mrs. Frank A. Linzel.

The club has under consideration property at Connecticut avenue and Dunlop street. The proposed clubhouse will have a seating capacity of 500. Organized in 1913, the club is one of the two largest federated clubs in Maryland, now having a membership of 575. The group of women contributes to the Social Service League of Montgomery County as well as to the Community Chest of Washington, to Friendship House, the Montgomery County Hospital and to the District of Columbia Tuberculosis Hospital at Glenn Dale, Md. A gift scholarship of $250 is awarded each year to a Chevy Chase girl, and gifts of money are made for the purchase of books for the District of Columbia Library, as well as to local school libraries.

Resolutions were adopted approving action of the executive board in protesting establishment of an incinerator at Chevy Chase Lake and also requesting that Connecticut avenue, from Chevy Chase Circle to Chevy Chase Lake be paved.

Bishop Elevates 66 to Priesthood

In impressive ceremonies at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception Tuesday, the Right Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of the archdiocese of Baltimore, ordained 66 as priests, probably the largest number to be ordained this year in any diocese in the country.

The candidates for holy orders filed into the church clad in the garb of deacons. Then, after Bishop McNamara had draped them in their priestly vestments they repeated, with him, the ordinary of the mass.

Bishop McNamara was assisted by the Rev. Anthony Vieban, S. S., and the Rev. John Jepson, S. S. In addition to the ordination of the 66 priests 14 men were made deacons and 80 ordanied subdeacons.

Yonker to Sponsor Boys Baseball Team

Edward G. Yonker, president of the Sanitary Grocery Co., who holds a $500 founder's membership in the Boys Club of the Metropolitan Police Department, yesterday became sponsor of a "midget" baseball team in the Boys Club Lague and offered $420 worth of school clothing for the 15 boys of the team winning in the league.

An additional founder's membership for $100 was subscribed upon the receipt of the personal check of Harold H. Levi, general manager of The Hecht Co. The company already is holder of a membership for this amount.

The report contained a list of previously subscribed and registered but unpublished founder's memberships of $100 each from the following: Woodard & Lothrop, N. D. Ely, F. W. Woolworth Co., James B. Horning, C. F. Fadeley, E. K. Houser, Army Navy Trading Co., Elite Laundry Co., Mrs. C. B. Fefferstein, Charles P. Maloney and A. C. Moses.

Woman, Struck By Automobile, Is Near Death

Aged Victim Steps Into Path of Car While Crossing Street.

Struck by an automobile yesterday as she stepped from the curb at Mount Vernon and Eighth streets northwest, Mrs. Catherine Debell, 74, of 809 Mount Vernon street northwest, was injured critically.

She was taken to George Washington University Hospital, where physicians said her left leg was broken and she was injured internally. Because of her advanced years, they fear for her life.

Alphonso Turner, colored, 37, of 820 Half street southwest, appeared at the inquest when it was thought Davis' motorcycle was in collision with a truck operated by Turner. Witnesses, however, told conflicting stories. Some testified Davis crashed into the truck while trying to pass. Others said the youth lost control of his machine and hit the tree. Turner was released.

Boy Shot in Foot; Youth Questioned

A 5-year-old boy narrowly escaped serious injury yesterday when he was shot in the foot with slugs from a 20-gauge shotgun.

The boy, Marvin Costello, of 1211 G street southeast, told police he was playing in the rear of his home when the shot hit his foot. He was treated at Gallinger Hospital and later released. His condition is not serious.

Police later took into custody George Martin, 20, of 1223 G street southeast. He said he and a companion were shooting at bottles with an air rifle.

40 Abbott Boys Frolic at Pool In Takoma Park

Teacher Gives Class a Holiday After Successful Staging of Play.

While other students sweltered yesterday in classrooms, 40 boys from the Abbott Vocational School splashed rowdily in the Takoma Park swimming pool, or played baseball on the playground nearby.

For 18 of the pupils, the holiday was a reward from their teacher, Mrs. Pauline Beall, for giving a good performance Wednesday afternoon in the school's production of "The Three Musketeers." The other boys got in on the affair simply because their teacher, Miss Margaret Street, thought they deserved an outing.

The boys first reported for classes, but at 10 a. m. they were dismissed so they could pile into street cars for the ride to Takoma Park.

Another group from the Abbott School also went holidaying yesterday. This was the Cooking Club, which meets weekly to try out some menu chosen by a member. Fifteen boys, accompanied by Mrs. Lucille Bailey, the school clerk, went on the outing yesterday at West River, Md.

Tonight at 8, 50 boys who have completed their vocational training will be graduated. The commencement will be held at the school, O street, between Sixth and Seventh northwest.

Citizen Groups Seek Roosevelt Aid on D. C. Bill

Federation Will Visit White House With Petition on Appropriation.

The aid of President Roosevelt to get through Congress an appropriation bill for Washington for the next fiscal year is to be sought today by representatives of the organized citizenship of the District.

Thomas E. Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, will head a delegation which will take to the White House a petition asking the President's aid.

The petition also will be personally presented to Vice President Garner, to Speaker Bankhead and to other leaders in Congress, it was said. Appeal of the District residents will be presented, too, to each member of the House and Senate.

Col. John W. Oehmann, building inspector, yesterday added his voice to the general plea of District officials for enactment of an appropriation bill for the next fiscal year.

The number of employes in the office, Col. Oehmann said, is below normal. His staff was reduced during the depression economy wave. Col. Oehmann asked for an addition of ten to his personnel. The Commissioners cut this. Congress cut the number of additional employes to four, one plan examiner and four building inspectors. Unless the increase in personnel is granted, Col. Oehmann said, it will be impossible to keep abreast of demands for building permits.

Capital's Diphtheria Death Rate Held One of Highest in Nation

Washington's sorry standing in the diphtheria mortality column was gravely acknowledged yesterday by Health Officer George C. Ruhland as the American Medical Association published a comparative table showing the Capital is lagging far behind in the prevention of this children's disease.

The current issue of the A. M. A. Journal reveals 19 large American cities had no diphtheria deaths last year, credit being due in most cases to intensive immunization campaigns.

Washington, however, handicapped by inadequate appropriations for school medical inspection and child hygiene work, had a higher diphtheria death rate than New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, Los Angeles, Cleveland, St. Louis, Baltimore and numerous other cities.

"The rising death rate here was discussed this morning at the monthly staff meeting of the Health Department," said Dr. Ruhland yesterday. "For the first five months of 1936 there were 19 deaths, compared to 29 deaths for all of 1935."

All but 5 of the 19 diphtheria deaths were white persons, mostly children. A total of 508 cases have been reported, 277 white and 231 colored.

"What is the matter with the other cities along the South Atlantic seaboard? One would expect Washington to have as low a rate as Baltimore, but the average diphtheria mortality has been nearly ten times as great."

In 1935 Baltimore had .7 deaths per 100,000, compared to 5.7 for the District and 3.3 for the country as a whole.

House Slated To Pass Bills For District

12 Measures Expected to Be Considered by Adjournment.

Chairman Norton Is Due to Return Monday From New Jersey.

Although the District is practically certain of not obtaining another legislative day in the House after it reconvenes, 12 of 14 local bills on the House calendar may be passed by unanimous consent or suspension of the rules before Congress adjourns.

Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee, will return to Washington from New Jersey on Monday and will take the first opportunity to call up noncontroversial District bills.

The Sisson bill to repeal the "red rider" is on the union calendar, but no attempt will be made to call it up unless a District day is scheduled.

The two most important of the other measures on the calendar are the Greenway resolution to set up a scrip system for relief of unemployment and the bill to establish a lunacy commission to take insanity cases out of open courts.

Patrolman Myers Fired Shots at Cab

A story appearing in The Post of June 2, describing a downtown police chase and shooting, stated six shots were fired by Policeman Irving Lubore at a speeding taxi.

Policeman Lubore did not fire the shots. He was driving a First Precinct scout car, accompanied by Policeman Marvin O. Myers. The shots were fired by Myers during the lengthy pursuit. The Post regrets the error.

At Bar Association's Outing

Marine Drill in Quantico Heat Fatigües Visiting D. C. Lawyers

All set for their annual outing, arranged by the District of Columbia Bar Association, the gentlemen of the bar boarded the steamer Potomac as the morning sun was warming the city.

Some had bathing suits over their shoulders. Others swung tennis racquets under their arms, or came with golf bags. Still others, having closed their offices for the day, were prepared to sit on the boat deck, rest their feet on the rail and relax.

Shortly after dark they were back. The bathing suits had never touched water. The tennis and golf paraphernalia had not been unpacked. And there hadn't been time to relax.

It seems that Gen. Charles H. Lyman, commandant at Quantico, and his Marines had other plans for the Washington visitors.

When the boat docked at the Marine base at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon, the Elks Boys' Band, which furnished the day's music, and a Marine escort led the attorneys and their guests, including several municipal and Federal judges, in a march up the hill and around to the corps drill grounds.

The lawyers assembled around the reviewing stand in the sun. It was warm. One bar member said: "I haven't been so hot since one time when I appeared before Judge So-and-So's bench." And he pointed to one of the justices in the reviewing stand.

The Marines of the First Marine Brigade, Fleet Marine Force, marched. (One of them fainted in the heat and was carried off in the corps ambulance.) A squadron of planes put on maneuvers. Bombers did spectacular target practice.

Then Gen. Lyman invited his guests to the gymnasium for some boxing. He led them over the field, which had recently been filled with drilling Marines. To the attorneys and the justices the walk to the gymnasium seemed a long one, but when they arrived there were plenty of seats. It was still warm, though.

Gen. Lyman in a short talk said he was glad to welcome the men of the bar and hoped they would enjoy watching the Marines at work and at play.

The "play" was the boxing, in which Army and Marine fighters were pitted against each other.

Meanwhile, E. M. Toland, the Bar Association's charge d'affaires for the day, asked Gen. Lyman if some Marine trucks might be put in service to transport some of the justices and lawyers back to the dock. They were "pretty well fagged," he said.

City Planner Urges Change In Zone Plan

Phenomenal Increase in Home Construction Is Cited by Nolen.

The necessity of greater co-ordination of zoning regulations, private real estate development and school building construction was impressed upon the National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday by its city planner, John Nolen, jr.

Presenting a report on population trends to the commission's monthly meeting, Nolen emphasized the phenomenal increase in home construction here during the last year. The fiscal year 1936 which ends June 30 has seen the erection of more apartment buildings and four-family flats than any year since the war, he asserted.

If the Capital's expansion is to be kept under orderly control, he said, the zoning map must be revised and care taken to co-ordinate real estate development with the public establishment of new parks, playgrounds and school buildings.

The commission plans to re-enlist the services of Harland Bartholomew, St. Louis consultant, in its study of possible changes in the zoning regulations with the District Zoning Commission. Bartholomew was employed as a consultant when the Capital's first zoning ordinance and map was adopted in 1920.

T. G. Jeffers, of the commission staff, presented a preliminary report showing the relationship of the Board of Education's five-year building program to existing and planned playgrounds. He pointed out, for example, how the present Takoma Park recreation center would serve the new high school which the Board of Education has recommended for construction on upper Fifth street.

Purchase of the last parcel of landed needed for full development of the Sherwood playground in the northeast section was announced. Houses now occupying the acquired site will be razed and the area turned over to the District.

With Frederic A. Delano, chairman, presiding, the planners will close their two-day meeting today.

DeShong Shuts Out White Sox With 2 Hits as Nats Win, 2-0

Only Six Able To Reach First

One of 2 Chicago Hits Is Tainted; Only One Man Gets to Second.

Cliff Bolton Drives In Both of Senators' Markers.

By Shirley Povich.

Another recurrent echo of Washington's bargain-counter trade of last winter that brought Jimmy DeShong to the Nats' pitching staff took the form yesterday of a superb 2-0 victory over the White Sox in which Master DeShong was a huge success.

Equaling even the sartorial excellence glistens with which DeShong in civilian life and which for several seasons had been defying parrallel, was the ball game he pitched yesterday. The sum total of the offensive power of the White Sox under the influence of DeShong's ptching was exactly two hits, and one of those was as illegitimate as a fourth strike.

Only six White Sox got on base. Only one of 'em got as far as second base and none of 'em reached third base. That's the kind of ball that the young man acquired from the Yankees in a trade for the inexpert Irving Hadley, pitched in acquiring his seventh victory of the season.

Hayes Gets Only Real Hit.

The maker of the only legitimate hit against DeShong was Jackie Hayes, a former Washington employe, who rapped a double against the leftfield fence in the seventh inning. Back in the fifth Jimmy Dykes had beaten out an infield hit that took a bad hop over Bluege's shoulder, but of White Sox hits that's all there was; there was no more.

The Nats very nearly needed DeShong's two-hit pitching to win the ball game, because the Nats were making no brilliant progress against the pitching of Sugar Cain and Babe Phelps, who pitched for the White Sox.

But when DeShong succeeded in retiring the last seven hitters in order, the Nats found themselves tolerably secure in fifth place, only a half game behind the fourth-place Cleveland Indians and only a game and a half in the rear of the third-place Tigers.

Cliff Bolton, who drove in both of the Nats' runs, won the dubious distinction of knocking in the first while knocking into a double play.

Sox Hitless Until Fifth.

Johnny Stone led off the second inning against Cain with a double to right centerfield, but progressed no farther than third on Joe Kuhel's short single to center. At this point Bolton drove a hard smash to Second Baseman Piet, who converted the ball into a double play while Stone was scoring.

The Stone-Bolton combination turned up with the only other run of the ball game in the fourth inning. With one out, Stone surprised all concerned by beating out a bunt, but he languished on first base while Kuhel lifted a luscious pop fly to Piet. He didn't languish, though, when Bolton smacked a pitch into left center for two bases. In fact, he crossed the plate standing up.

He's Down! He's Up!—Johnny tone Slides Into Second Base and Out of the Ball Game

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

The Brooklyn Dodgers' pitching staff, which for the past few years has been composed of Mungo, Mungo, Mungo and Mungo, was threatened with complete extinction the other day when the Messrs. Mungo, as Mr. Van Lingle Mungo is known to the trade, kicked up a fuss and said he wouldn't pitch for the Dodgers any more.

POVICH.

The National League in general, in trampling the Dodgers underfoot for the past several years, has been very much aware that Mungo is the only pitcher on the Brooklyn staff. The Dodgers have had various other characters out there on the mound throwing the ball, but among all the hay chuckers, oat burners and crooked-arm ball heavers on the club, only Mr. Mungo deserved the description as a pitcher in the true sense fo the word.

And now Mr. Mungo is very much dissatisfied with his lot. He regards himself as wasting the fragrance of his very good pitching on a hopelessly sunken ball club and his future with the Dodgers as no brighter than a barrel of soot. And what's more, Mr. Mungo's petulance and general disposition in the matter is in no whit improved as he looks around the league and sees inferior pitchers sharing in the World Series spoils and otherwise cutting in on the big dough.

However that may be, the entire situation can be very easily summed up with the observation that it is Mr. Mungo's tough luck. The baseball fathers ac'd wisely (for the baseball fathers) when they drew up the player contracts that are still in use. A ball player who pens his name to one of those contracts signs away all rights to his pursuit of happiness in baseball.

If a ball player, like Mungo, is dissatisfied with his lot then that is just too bad—for the ball player. Under the option clause, a club holds title to its ball players from season to season and a player finds himself automatically returned to that club at the start of the next year, willy-nilly.

A guy like Mungo hasn't a chance to get away from the Dodgers unless the Dodgers choose to sell or trade him. He has only one choice—to get out of baseball and stay out. That stay out business is the result of the big league by-laws that imposes a virtual boycott by all other clubs on ball players who are unable to come to terms with the clubs that hold their contracts.

Some day some ball player is going to get really mad and take that big league player contract to court and upset the whole scheme of baseball contracts. Big league owners won one test cast before a sympathetic court during the Federal League war in 1912, but there was evidence at that time that it might easily be reversed in a court of appeal.

The option clause in player contracts which forbid a player to sign with another club at the expiration of his contract borders on restraint of trade and the big leagues know it. They shudder at going to court again, even with their high-powered lawyers.

Cubs Rally; Down Boston Bees, 6-4

Chicago, June 11 (AP).—The Cubs spotted Boston an early 4-run lead today and then persistently sniped at Ray Benge to defeat the Bees, 6 to 4, in the opening game of the series. The victory extended the National League champions' winning streak to eight games and put them in second place.

Stan Hack's homer at the start of the seventh broke a 4-to-4 tie.

Yanks Nose Out Detroit, 10-9, In Tenth

Rolfe Drives In Winning Run; Three Clout Circuit Drives.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 11.—The Yankees maintained their 2½-game American League lead today by outlasting the Detroit Tigers, 10 to 9, today in a 10-inning slugging duel.

Red Rolfe's double sending in the tying and winning runs with one out in the last of the tenth broke up the ball game, after the Tigers had gone to the front in their half of the extra inning.

The double was Rolfe's fourth extra base blow of the game. He had two other two-baggers and a triple, as well, driving in three runs.

Lou Gehrig hit his twelfth homer of the year with Rolfe on base in the first inning, to give the Yanks their first two runs. Earlier, the Tigers had scored twice.

Goose Goslin smashed out his tenth home run, with a mate on base, in the third to put the Tigers in front, and Frank Reiber, filling in for the ailing Mickey Cochran behind the plate, hit a round-tripper in the ninth to tie the score, after the Yanks had taken the lead with a three-run splurge in the eighth.

Parley to Quell Van Mungo's Rebellion

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 11.—The one-day revolt of Van Lingle Mungo, fire ball king of the Brooklyn Dodgers, came to an abrupt end today with few shots and no casualties.

The Brooklyn front office announced the big righthander, who quit the club in Pittsburgh yesterday, had reconsidered his decision to go back to the farm unless sold or traded, and would rejoin the Dodgers in Cincinnati Saturday.

Mungo later denied he had reached an agreement with James Mulvey, a vice president of the club, with whom he talked today, but hinted one is on the way.

"I'm to see Mulvey again tomorrow, he said. "That will decide it. I won't say I'm not going back to the club, but I'm not leaving tonight."

Fined $200, Suspended.

Mungo, who returned from Pittsburgh by plane last night, was fined $200 and suspended today by Stephen McKeever, 81-year-old president of the Dodgers.

McKeever then hurled straight into the pitcher's teeth the crackling ultimatum that the Dodgers will not consider selling or trading him to another National League Club. The club's attitude is that if Mungo wishes to remain in the big leagues he'll go back to the Dodgers and like it.

Papa H. Van Mungo came up from Pageland, S. C., where the family owns a cotton gin, a general store, a gas station and most of the farm land in Chesterfield County, to join the pitcher's board of strategy.

Fred Marberry Steps Off Mound for Good

True to his word, big Fred Marberry packed his belongings in the Nats' locker rooms and parted company with the Washington Club—in voluntary recognition that his big league career was at an end.

Thus the former pitching idol of Washington fans whose fast-ball relief pitching had been the scourge of the American League a decade ago took the action he said he would take if his attempted comeback proved a failure.

Signed a month ago by the Nats after being given his unconditional release by the Giants, Marberry declared at that time:

"Mr. Griffith will never have to fire me. The moment I think I am through as a pitcher, I'll walk up to him and tell him."

Marberry visited the Nats' owner in his office early yesterday morning and made good on his word.

"I guess I can't make it, Mr. Griffith," said the soft-spoken Texan. "Haven't got the stuff I thought I had, so you'd better give me my release. I sure am grateful for the chance you gave me."

Marberry had appeared in four relief roles with the Nats and pitched impressively only in one. Lacking the fast ball of his salad days, he was relying almost wholly on his control and slow curves. With that as a repertoire, he had faith in his ability to stage a come-back.

But in his first appearance in the box, against Cleveland, a wild throw cost the Nats the ball game in the eleventh inning. He came to his decision to quit after a ninth-inning performance on Wednesday when he pitched two singles and a triple to Cleveland batters before he could get the side out.

Marberry has no thought of returning to the umpiring role he held in the American League last year. Umpiring is distasteful to the easy-going Texan and he hopes instead, to obtain a minor league managerial post.

Marberry will leave in a few days for his Texas farm which he owns outright. He faces a secure financial future, but will consider an offer to manage the Fort Worth Texas League club.

Mrs. Meckley Wins in Md. Golf Play

By a Staff Correspondent.

Suburban Country Club, Pikesville, Md., June 11.—Two Washington golfers, Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring, defending champion, and Mrs. Leo Walper, of Kenwood, today entered the semifinals of the Maryland State Women's Championship.

Mrs. Meckley, crossing paths with 20-year-old Helen Dettweiler, of Congressional, for the third time in an important tournament, triumphed, 2 and 1, while Mrs. Walper eliminated Mrs. Jack Scott, of Kenwood, 1 up in a thriller.

Tomorrow morning they will meet two Baltimore golfers.

Mrs. Meckley will oppose Mrs. Mary Louise Belt, of Baltimore, unattached, and Mrs. Walper will take on Mrs. William B. Hurst, jr., of Elk Ridge.

Two down after playing four holes, the result of erratic iron shots, Mrs. Meckley was obliged to keep close to par to defeat Miss Dettweiler, the 1934 titleholder, who lost to Mrs. Meckley in the 1935 Middle Atlantic finals, and again last Friday in the District championship finals.

Miss Dettweiler 3-putted the sixth green and was wide off the target on the short eighth, and Mrs. Meckley won both holes in par figures to square the match. All even going to the twelfth, Mrs. Meckley won this hole with a par 5 to become 1 up, after Miss Dettweiler found the trap with her iron shot.

The Congressional golfer had an out-of-bounds at the fifteenth, losing the hole to go 2 down. She got back in the match by taking the sixteenth with a par 3 when Mrs. Meckley drove into the trap. Mrs. Meckley won the seventeenth with a 4 and clinches the match.

Outdoor Mat Show Postponed a Week

The wrestling card scheduled for last night at Griffith Stadium was postponed until next Thursday night because of rain. Vincent Lopez, heavyweight title contender, was to have worked against Gus Sonnenberg in the feature.

Promoter Joe Turner will make an effort to have as much of the original card as possible held over for the postponed show.

R. Ferrell's Bat Gives Red Sox 7-to-5 Game

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 11.—Rick Ferrell's bat bludgeoned the St. Louis Browns to defeat today as the Red Sox won the series opener, 7 to 5.

The catching member of Boston's Ferrell battery clubbed out a homer in the fourth inning, and followed it up with a double with the bases loaded, to send three runs across the plate in the fifth.

The Browns had taken a 3-run lead in the first on two hits, a pair of walks and a balk. Two hits brought in another run in the fourth, and three safe blows added another in the seventh.

Mrs. Hill Moves Into Western Semifinal

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., June 11.—Any lingering doubt concerning the status of Mrs. Opal S. Hill as the favorite in the Women's Western Open Golf tournament faded today as the Kansas City veteran moved into the semifinals with an easy 8-and-7 victory over Mrs. Lillian Zech, of Norwood Park, Ill.

Mrs. Hill, medalist and defending champion, will meet Miss Edna Saenger, Shreveport, La., youngster who has provided most of the tournament, surprises, tomorrow.

Miss Saenger eliminated Miss Anna Sue Kennedy, of Columbia, Mo., 3 and 2 to go into the semifinals today.

Mrs. Charles Dennehy, of Lake Forest, Ill., and Miss Dorothy Traung, of San Francisco, became the lower bracket's semifinalists.

Burnett Tops Contingent With a 73

Fitzgerald Wins in Play-Off; McCarthy and Caldwell Qualify.

By Dave Herman.
A Staff Correspondent.

Five Farms, Md., June 11.—Six Washington golfers today qualified for the title flight in the Middle Atlantic championship which opened today over the Five Farms course of the Baltimore Country Club.

The District challengers who made the grade are Volney Burnett, of Indian Spring Club, 73; Bobby Brownell, of Manor, 74; Billy Dettwiler, of Congressional, 77; Levi Yoder, of Kenwood, 77; Harvey Johnson, of Columbia, 78, and Maury Fitzgerald, of Kenwood, 79.

A Baltimore golfer, Spencer Overton, bespectacled veteran player from Rolling Road, won the medal with a brilliant 71, one over par, coming within two shots of equaling the course record which Johnny Fischer, of Cincinnati, set in the 1932 National Amateur.

The topheavy favorite and defending champion, Morton McCarthy, 200-pound giant from Norfolk, got in only after a struggle. McCarthy, way off the form he displayed in his first round of the National Open at Balustrol, scored a 77, after going out in 40. He was forced to do some sharp shooting on the stretch in order to break 80.

A thunderstorm, which broke late in the afternoon, blasted the qualifying hopes of two District golfers—Tommy Webb, jr., of Washington Golf and Country Club, and Hickman Greene, of Manor. They had just rounded the bend when the storm descended. Greene was out in 38. A 40 would have put him in, but he frittered away too many strokes in the driving rain, and wound up with 83. The husky Webb, former Maryland football star, came to the last hole needing a four to get in a play off at 79, but knocked his second to the left of the green, went 10 feet past the pin with his third, missed his putt and wound up with a five—one too many.

The playoff, taking place just before darkness set in, was between Bernie Hallock and Fritzgerald, of Kenwood, and Don McPhail, of the host club. Fitzgerald and McPhail won with fives, and Hallock, after getting off a screaming drive, a fairly good second, took four shots from the back edge of the green, for a six, finally missing a two-footer.

Burnett, who made the best showing of the District contingent of 25, shot the back nine in an even par 35 after turning in 38, three over. The 17-year-old Brownell out in 36, took a 38 on the back side.

Young Johnson did some rallying. Nine over par for the first nine, he played the incoming side in even par 35.

D. C. Net Team Is Favorite to Win Cup

By John R. Vosburgh.

A stout-hearted tennis crusade in quest of the Hotchkiss Cup, which has been absent from Washington for three years began last night. The crusaders even went to sea about it.

Sailing for Norfolk, Va., Dooly Mitchell, Tom Markey, Hugh Lynch, Tony Latona, Rickey Willis, Ed Mather and Lieut. Stanley R. Robinson were intent on recapturing the prized trophy which Washington has not won since 1932.

If, by any chance, the Capital delegation returns empty handed, there is a strong possibility they will be exiled from the city. They comprise the strongest team in the event this year and are odds-on favorites to win.

As is annually the case, it will be a four-team engagement with Washington, Baltimore, Norfolk and Richmond embattled in a two-day struggle. In the 16 years of competition, Washington has won it seven times to Baltimore's eight. Richmond won it once, in 1933. Norfolk has yet to win it.

Three Stars Absent.

Fortunately for Richmond, Norfolk and Baltimore, Barney Welsh, Ralph McElvenny and Yelverton Garnett were unable to represent Washington. Welsh is competing in a Western tournament and Garnett is leaving for points North. McElvenny is busily engaged in a keen Departmental League struggle which he is reluctant to forsake.

However, the local delegation is rather formidable notwithstanding. The mass rush to membership in the Edgemoor Club is directly responsible for the sudden rise in stock of Washington's Hotchkiss Cup chances. The competition is open only to club players, and Mitchell, Markey, et al. were mere public parks players last year.

The draw will be made in Norfolk this morning. Winners of today's matches will play Saturday for the title and the cup. Baltimore looms as the chief worry, if any, for Washington. Eddie Jacobs is still the Middle Atlantic Association's ranking player, with the exception of Welsh, and his brother, Billy, assures the Maryland metropolis almost certainly another point. Washington is not particularly worried. The Capital contingent bristles with strength throughout and the Hotchkiss Cup has never been won by a two-man team.

Edith Clark Wins in City Net Tourney, Goes Into Semifinals

Edith Clark, No. 1 seeded player in the eighth annual City of Washington women's tennis championships, had a busy afternoon yesterday in the process of getting into the semifinal round at the Edgemoor Club.

It was unseeded Dorothy Anderson, from the Pittsburgh, Pa., neighborhood, who gave Miss Clark a rather uncomfortable hour and a half before losing, 9—7, 6—4. The Pennsylvania lass had set point in the first set at 7—6, but the experienced Miss Clark weathered the storm and went on to win with a serene finish, despite some provoking lobbing on the part of her opponent.

Today she must encounter another stubborn individual in the formidable person of Sara Moore, No. 2 ranking player of the District and the defending champion. With entrance into the final round hanging on the result, the two rivals will meet at 11 a. m., and it is highly possible they may still be playing as late as 1 or 2 o'clock. That is how close a battle it promises to be.

Miss Moore was impressive yesterday in disposing of Bobsey Turney, 6—1, 6—1, in gaining the semifinals. To most observers, the District's second ranking player has improved over last season and, although Miss Clark is the choice to win, Miss Moore is conceded a first-rate fighting chance.

The only other match scheduled yesterday was a quarter-final encounter in the mixed doubles, which Mary Ryan and Charlie Channing won by default from Anne and Ralph Ellis.

The tournament schedule plans to have Mrs. Margaret Robinson meet the winner of today's quarter-final match between Mary Cootes and Mary Ryan tomorrow in the other semifinal, with the finals slated for Sunday morning at 11 a. m. and the doubles final Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.
Women's Singles.
Quarter-finals—Sara Moore defeated Mrs. Bobsey Turney, 6—1, 6—1; Edith Clark defeated Dorothy Anderson, 9—7, 6—4.
Mixed Doubles.

TODAY'S MATCHES.
Women's Singles.
Semi-finals—Edith Clark vs. Sara Moore, 11 a. m.
Quarter-finals—Mary Cootes vs. Mary Ryan, 4:30 p. m.

Brewers Regain Form On Scramble Line-up

Ever since Chris Heurich, jr. tossed conventional baseball strategy into a cocked hat, literally speaking, his brewery boys have been doing all right for themselves in the Industrial League.

The Brewers started off with a bang and then collapsed with a bing. Manager Huck Stahl worked frantically to right the team, using all the known managerial remedies, but to no avail. So Heurich disgustedly placed the names of eight regulars in his Panama, drew them out, one by one, told Stahl to place them in the line-up as he had drawn them.

Huck did. And they've won three straight.

Harry Pitt Wins Over Stokes In Va. Golf

Richmond, Va., June 11.—Staging one of the most brilliant comebacks ever witnessed in this noted hotbed of golfing activities, Harry Pitt, Washington star, eliminated Earl Stokes, stalwart Louisville shotmaker, on the twenty-second hole here today in the Country Club of Virginia invitation tournament.

Both qualified easily yesterday in the top 32 and each had won a preliminary match when they tangled this afternoon. Pitt defeated Welford Reed, University of Virginia player, and Stokes trimmed Alex Norris, a local youngster, in the first round.

They came to the turn all even but a good match turned into an apparent rout when Stokes won the tenth, eleventh and twelfth in a row.

Three down going to the fourteenth, the husky Pitt turned on the steam in a brilliant display of shots and squared the match at the seventeenth carpet. Pitt sank a tricky 5-footer for a half in pars at the home hole and they moved to extra holes.

The 392 yard nineteenth was halved in orthodox par 4's, but Pitt's bid for a win at twentieth was stopped when Stoke laid him a stymie and they halved it in 5's. The difficult dogleg twenty-first was just another par for each of them, but at the twenty-second, a par three, Pitt in turn laid Stokes a dead stymie and the Washingtonian's par brought him victory.

Lemerise, Star of Tech Nine, Unimpressive With .412 Mark

By John R. Vosburgh.

Belated return on the interhigh series batting averages reveal, among other things, that Roy Lemerise, Tech High's third baseman, easily wins the award for being the most overlooked player in the series.

After much painful compiling by your slow-witted correspondent, the figures show that young Lemerise was probably as good a third baseman as there was in the series. Yet he failed to make so much as an all-high second team.

What Lemerise did probably accounted for this rank injustice less than the way he did it. He batted .412, but got nothing but singles, and that is no way to impress the public, much less the High School Baseball Writers Association.

The mere fact that Lemerise played four games and handled 12 chances without an error also apparently failed to impress. The brilliant stops of Dickie Lynham, of Western, and Ed McDonough, of Central threw the Tech boy's steady fielding more or less into total eclipse.

Personally this all-high selector prefers to cast his second-team all-high vote in favor of Lemerise instead of McDonough who was far from error-proof and hit .238. Lemerise, incidentally, was also the best base-stealer in the series, snagging four, to help make Tech the best base-stealing team of the season.

Tech, which finished in third place, was the hardest-hitting team, leading Western's champions by 20 points. Eastern, with an average of .210, as compared with Tech's .293, hit a new low for a Lincoln Parker batting attack. Central was also surprisingly low, hitting .217, although missing the interhigh title by an eyelash.

Most triples—Tech, 3.

Most home runs—Central, 6.

Most stolen bases—Tech, 10.

Most triples—Wes Snow (Tech), 2.

Old Rivals Meet.

A young but bitter sandlot rivalry will be resumed Sunday at 3 o'clock on the Bladensburg field, where the Prince Georges A. C. and National Novelty teams will have it out.

55 Montgomery Trackmen Vie In Meet

Scholastic track and field records of the State of Maryland will be jeopardized today in the twenty-second renewal of the State Olympiad as upward of 1,000 athletes, representing 23 counties and the City of Baltimore, compete in the Baltimore stadium.

Fifty-five athletes from Montgomery County, including winners from Bethesda, Sherwood and Kensington, titlists in the meet last Saturday, will attempt to raise the county's rating above twelfth place, the highest it has been in the last three years.

Events get under way at 10 a. m. After a recess for lunch the senior events will last until late in the afternoon. The State meet climaxes a series of county and city meets.

Sunday Game Wanted.

Metropolitan Swamps City Bank, 14-5

National Metropolitan went into a tie with National Savings for the lead in the Bankers League of the Post Sandlot Association yesterday by swamping City Bank, 14 to 5. Both league leaders play today and a defeat for either will throw the other into undisputed possession of the lead.

The Metros battered out 20 hits in their victory, including a home run by Pitcher Woytoych and another by Second Baseman Mattingly, who collected four hits in six trips to the plate.

Metropolitan must turn back the strong Hibbs team at 5 p. m. on the No. 9 diamond in order to keep the lead.

McKell Is Victor in Charles Town Feature; "Double" Pays $91.80

Outlasts Two Rivals in Stretch

Wisner Rides Chisel to Victory; Angalese Wins Juvenile.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 22.—McKell, a veteran son of Busy American, with a busy young man by the name of B. Myers in the saddle, accounted for the feature race here this afternoon. The gelding was in front most of the way, but had to be given some energetic handling in the final stages to stave off the closing rushes of Bonnie Dhu and Lady Dunlin. The margins were a length and a head.

The contest, over the Charles Town course of slightly more than 6 furlongs and named for Station WMMN, of Fairmont, W. Va., was run over a fast track and through a drizzling rain. The time of 1:18 was fair for the route and conditions.

Daily doubling, the popular sport at this track, brought a return of $91.80 to those who backed the combination of Clifton's Nell and Ada Wan.

Jockey V. Wisner celebrated his return to the saddle after an absence of several days by riding Chisel to victory in the first race at a $8.60 mutuel. Wisner took the son of Trojan to the front at once and it was not a contest from there to the end. Exclusive was always second and Jolly King closed some ground t· be third.

Clifton's Nell, capably handled by Johnny Shanks, won the second race from Gay Lass and Spear. The winning mare had a battle on her hands before shaking off Spear and then had to be heavily handled to stave off the closing rush of Gay Lass. The winner paid $17.40.

Adawan, a favorite on the smaller tracks, led all the way in the fourth race to pay a $7 mutuel. She was threatened in the closing stages by Nay Nay and Adriatic. The race was one of the fastest of the meeting, the mare running the four and one-half furlongs in .50 1-5, only one-fifth off the track record.

A little daughter of Broadway Jones, named Cingalese, sprinted away with the day's juvenile event. The race was the first of her career and brought Apprentice C. Simpson his first winner.

Sammy Palumbo rode a heady race to get Whiskora home at a $6 mutuel in the sixth race. Unable to get to the front in the early running, Palumbo held his position along the rail and then shot between Easter Herald and Polly Plum in the late stretch to win going away.

CINGALESE had speed to go to the front at once, opened a long lead and was being taken in hand through the stretch. MISS WRACK went forwardly all the way and was best. WORTHFUL came from far back to enter contention on the outside and finished gamely. NIGHT GLASS dropped back steadily. INDIA PRINT and ON SEA were badly outrun.

Out Fishin' . . . . .

By Jack Hawley.

Illegal netting of bluefish on S. W. Middles is with us again this season and it is bound to increase in operation as the season progresses, unless Virginia and Maryland authorities do a better job of confiscation of equipment and prosecution than during 1935.

Unfortunately, the Federal Government has to sit on the sidelines, helpless to assist, because Congress has not legislated control over this deplorable situation. State authorities on the Eastern Shore won't exert themselves sufficiently to break up illegal netting, claiming in many instances the type of nets being used are legal, but they don't admit that a gill can easily be made illegal. As for buck-nets, purse nets, etc, "they are not in use," say the authorities. This writer says they are, and will be all summer long—if everyone is still winking, which isn't hard to do in some counties.

The laws of Virginia and Maryland prohibit the appointment of a nonresident to act in the capacity of game and fish warden, usually appointing approximately 25 persons to act in such capacity from each State, yet illegal netting continues to thrive year after year and with greater preparation for the coming season than ever before, and at the expense of sport fishermen and lost revenue from both States involved.

Annual Take Is Huge.

The annual take of bluefish by illegal operations no doubt runs into hundreds of tons.

The majority of boatmen are cooperating with us in our effort to stamp out this vice because they wish to continue future fishing.

We have notified the Bureau of Fisheries, United States Steamboat Inspection Service and other sources of assistance, who helped us keep the netters on the move last year. This year the big fight is on in earnest and we intend to give the anglers something in return for their expensive fishing without continued molestation by illegal use of nets.

Anglers are requested to carry cameras and secure such pictures of violations as may occur, try to get close enough to get the number of the violators' boat. If there is no number, try other identification, such as color of boat, length, beam, name, etc. If a 16-millimeter camera is available it is much better because all operations can later be projected as shown at the time of hauling the net. Co-operation must be coming forth from all anglers or suffer the loss of good fishing, which is sure to follow if we are going to continue to watch the wholesale destruction of, pound for pound, the fightingest and most edible fish that swims in salt water.

Good fishing for this week-end is assured, barring inclement weather. Messick, Va., reports plenty of bluefish off Buckroe Beach. Wachapreague continues to be very good, as it has been for several weeks; large channel bass, trout, porgies and kings. Both the Eastern and Western Shore towns are watching boatmen coming in daily with larges catches of croakers—the bay and the Potomac are full of them. One can almost shut his eyes and pick a croaker fishing ground this week-end.

Solomons reports very good croaker fishing, but few trout. Galesville reports good croaker fishing, with no trout, but an abundance of alewives for chumming at Capt. Hazard's wharf. The local Municipal Market is expecting to have a supply on hand, but to date the report has not been confirmed.

Reedsville, Va., has plenty of chum for anglers coming into the Middles from that side of the bay. Fresh water fishing below Chain Bridge is still producing some fine rockfish, big catfish and panfish, if you care for the small ones.

Watch the flags on top of the Federal buildings Saturday morning. If in the west—that's the time the fish bite best.

How to Fish?

Someone writes: "Why don't you tell us where to go and how to fish?" Looking back over our record we think we have covered every phase of both fresh and saltwater fishing within 600 miles of Washington and in several instances have perused Florida and the West Coast, including the kind of bait to use in every instance.

Fishing is rather peculiar, speculative in most instances. In company with Dr. Paul Hatch this writer journeyed to Ridge, Md., we put our 50-foot boat on its course to S. W. Middles and chummed for blues. Croakers were hitting large slices of menhaden as fast as we could get our lines over the side. Not the usual bite, but a savage strike that even the captain admitted at the time was a blue hitting the bait. With experience of more than 30 years we could not tell the difference, so vicious was the strike and run of the croaker. Naturally amazement was our feeling when we observed our catch. This writer has never before heard of "chumming" for hardheads and passes this information on to those who feel they have something in store for them. It beats anything we have ever tried—except bluefish—Dr. Hatch landed one weighing 6½ pounds, also a 6¼-pound and two 4-pound trout (weak fish), which is, for the largest fish, a record on S. W. Middles, for the past 15 years.

Black bonito, sargeant fish, cabio—all of these names are appropriate for the black scoundrels with shovel-like heads, fighting eyes, set wide apart above an unusually large mouth containing two rows of shark-like teeth capable of severing and devouring fish half its own length—have suddenly appeared 1 mile offshore from St. Jeromes Creek, which is reached from Ridge, Md. The cabio ranges from New Jersey to Brazil and is not common in any portion of its range.

Last Sunday morning three of these ebony gamesters were taken from Drury's net, but not until they had given the five boatmen a battle which ended in a thorough wetting and near exhaustion for all. When weighed about an hour later at the dock the scales read 43, 28 and 22 pounds, respectively.

Macks Defeat Cleveland By 5 to 2

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 11.—Indian Bob Johnson went on the warpath today, hitting two homers and a double to drive in four runs as the Athletics defeated the Cleveland Indians, 5 to 2, in the opener of the current series.

His stickwork and the five-hit pitching of Harry Kelley put the Athletic in front to stay from the second inning to the finish. Mel Harder, who went the route for the Tribe, was touched for 11 hits.

Stocks Advance in Million-Share Session With Best Prices in Last Hour.

New York, June 11.—Stocks moved further ahead in a turnover of around a million shares. Government bonds weakened, the usual experience following a new issue. Commodity markets were firm. September wheat closed ⅝ of a cent higher at 85⅞ cents a bushel.

Early trading in stocks was at a relaxed pace, but prices were firm. Westinghouse had another break—about 2½ points—wich discouraged speculative operations, although much of the loss later was recovered. Telephone and Western Union were higher and the motor group advanced. Oils also were firm, and the public utilities continued their improvement. Buoyancy was shown in the farm implement group, directly on the Government's estimate of larger crops and the ample provision made for farm bonuses in the Republican platform.

In the closing hour the market gathered more way and the leading issues added to their earlier gains. Catching the speculative eye were Radio, Boeing, General Motors, Steel, Case and Westinghouse, which recovered earlier losses. Along with Case and Harvester, Corn Products rose in the farm class.

Depression was unrelieved among the hard liquor shares, and stories were told of an oversupply of whisky and shutdown of distilleries. New low prices were quoted for American Commercial Alcohol, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and National Distillers. Shenley sold within a small fraction of the year's worst in dropping a point. Other soft spots were McCall and Spalding preferred.

Food Shares Active.

Most of the food stocks climbed on greater activity. National Biscuit gained a point. Tobaccos were strong. Montgomery Ward, ex dividend, sold at the best price in several years. Silver issues came forward, especially Cerro de Pasco and U. S. Smelting. Prices were firm to fractionally higher in the oils, chemicals, rails, utilities, coppers, rail equipments, amusements, merchants and rubbers. Gimbels, Rolling Mill, Kelsey Hayes and Ward Baking were higher.

Foreign exchanges were quiet. Francs at the gold export point permitted a further withdrawal of the metal from Paris and apparently the time is rapidly narrowing when action will be taken to modify the gold standard and devalue the franc. This week's statement of the Bank of France shows another heavy gold loss—$99,000,000. Circulation also rose sharply, partly a reflection of month-end operations. Bank of England continued to add to its gold reserve, as a precautionary measure against abandonment of gold by the countries still on.

Railroad Earnings.

Railroad earnings reports for May will appear this week. An increase in net operating income is assured from the rise of 16 per cent in car loadings compared with a year ago. The roads are now earning their fixed charges with something to spare, and only a poor crop movement this autumn can put the roads as a whole into the red this year. Many lines are nevertheless still in difficult positions, and probably can be extricated only by reorganizations and consolidations. Immediate earnings may be affected by the I. C. C. decision on extension of emergency freight rates, expected shortly.

Consolidation.

Winding up the Standard Oil Export Corporation will be the logical step to follow recent elimination of the preferred stock, effected through substitution of a bond issue of Standard of New Jersey, now the sole owner of all interest in the Export Corporation. The laws on consolidated tax returns make it advisable for parent companies to absorb their subsidiaries wherever possible, and for months Standard has been working along that line. Other developments will be announced from time to time. The Export Corporation has been run as a service company rather than as a profit-making concern.

London Trading.

While James M. Landis, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, chairman of the Senate Banking and Currency Commission, insist that no shift of trading from the New York Stock Exchange to the London market and other foreign trading centers is taking place, the fact is that a certain amount of such shifting undoubtedly is taking place. A Wall Street firm this morning received an order to buy General Motors stock on the London Stock Exchange and the order was not for a picayune 100-share lot either, but was for many times that amount.

Howard Moran A Banker Here For 45 Years

American Security Vice President Marks Anniversary.

A native of Washington, Mr. Moran attended public and private schools both in this city and Prince George's County, Md. In starting his business career he first became identified with the drug business in Hyattsville, Md., but his early interest in financial affairs prompted him to join the banking fraternity.

On June 12, 1891, he entered the services of the Union Savings Bank, of this city, which had recently been organized. Remaining there until May, 1896, he became affiliated with the Traders National Bank until the formation of the Home Savings Bank. With the latter institution he served as assistant treasurer, treasurer and vice president until the merger with the American Security & Trust Co. in 1919.

Mr. Moran has served on many important committees of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, and in 1926 was elected its president. He is a member of the Board of Trade, Better Business Bureau, Columbia Historical Society and a director of Peoples Drug Stores. He is also a member of the Chevy Chase Club, University Club and National Press Club.

Gold at New Peak Of 10.48 Billions

By the Associated Press.

The weekly condition statement of Federal Reserve banks yesterday showed American stocks of gold reached new high levels under the inflow of French gold. A total of $71,000,000 landed on American shores during the week, bringing the total to $10,480,000,000, an amount which exceeded last year's total by $1,464,000,000.

As a result, member bank reserve balances, aided also by other factors, rose $120,000,000 during the week to a total of $5,833,000,000, a sum estimated to be about $2,950,000,000 in excess of legal requirements.

Money in circulation decreased $16,000,000 during the week, while Treasury cash and deposits with Reserve banks were detransferred to the amount of $20,000,000 to commercial institutions during the week.

Wheat Advances With Lack of Rain

Chicago, June 11 (AP).—Renewal of dry-weather complaints from spring-crop areas led to higher prices for wheat today. In particular a good deal of North Dakota's wheat acreage was reported as having failed to get sufficient relief through recent rains.

Special notice in this connection was taken of bullish behavior of the Minneapolis market where September wheat jumped 2 cents a bushel because of active buying for mills.

Tobacco Markets.

Baltimore, Md., June 11.—Maryland—The figures this week are receipts, 600 hogsheads; sales, 1,791 hogsheads. The actual new offerings this week were about 1,500 hogsheads, and most of which were sold, but the sales included some 500 hogsheads of old crop. Prices for new crop were higher than before excepting for the best grade, which remained at 40 cents.

Ohio—Nothing doing.

Maryland—Due to dry weather, particularly in St. Marys, Charles and lower Prince Georges counties, where very little tobacco has been transplanted, it is estimated that only about 15 per cent of the intended crop is now in the field.

Maryland firm leaf—Nondescript, 3@4; common, 4@10; medium, 10@25; good to fine, red, 25@40.

By Martha Orr

IT'S ONLY A FEW DAYS MORE TILL THE TRIAL, AND "DOGGIE" SAYS WE MUST HAVE THAT PICTURE.
WELL, CHEER UP! I'M SURE THE NEWSPAPERS WILL FIND IT FOR US.
MY BOSS IS PULLING WIRES TO HAVE YOUR TRIAL POSTPONED, IN CASE THE PICTURE DOESN'T TURN UP AS SOON AS WE EXPECT.
FAR AWAY, IN THE HOME OF THE GIRL WHO, UNKNOWINGLY HOLDS THE PICTURE THAT MARY IS TRYING DESPERATELY TO FIND.
